Fire at Whitney's

Barrel firm loses building to fire

"It's going to stagger us, but it's not going to lick us," said Ed Whitney on Tuesday morning.

His business was hit by a three-alarm fire Monday evening. The fire destroyed the main building of the family-owned barrel recycling business. The building was not insured.

The building was used for cleaning and repainting 55-gallon drums. Most of the drums in the building were empty, but one contained thinner and another sludge.

Also destroyed in the fire was a front-end loader and several compressors.

The company is located at 888 Woburn St., near the Woburn line. Several other buildings escaped serious damage in the fire, although the firm's office was flooded. There were several trucks in the yard at the time of the fire, and there was some minor damage to some of them.

The fire drew extensive television coverage. Wilmington firefighters summoned aid from Woburn, Reading, North Reading, Tewksbury and Burlington.

No firefighters were injured in the fire, but a dog chained to a pole near the building was killed.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Whitney said his operation would either recycle or destroy barrels which were picked up from various industrial sites. Barrels which could not be re-used were shredded and sold as scrap metal.

The company is frequently confused with the Whitney Barrel Company, a Woburn firm owned by a relative, but in no way connected with E.C. Whitney & Sons.

Special permit for rink taken under advisement

by Arlene Surprenant

With several neighbors vocally opposed to adding to the principle use of the Ristuccia Exposition Center (ice arena) and "too many uncertainties," board of appeals chairman Bruce MacDonald refused to act on a special permit request before his board last night (Tuesday). Instead, he agreed to take the whole thing under advisement, pending further investigation.

The request, to open the arena to trade shows, antique car shows, exhibitions, and sports clinics in addition to ice time and use as the Boston Bruins training center, was made by Daniel Ristuccia. Ristuccia told those present he needed to generate funds to maintain operating costs and go toward a cancer foundation established in his mother's memory when the arena is not used as a rink.

Approximately 25 residents showed up to express their concern. Most were outspoken against traffic and parking problems generated by the first Bruins game held at the arena Monday night. They pointed out with a five alarm fire at the same time, emergency vehicles couldn't get through, posing a danger to Wilmington residents.

Also of concern was the possibility of creating additional traffic congestion seven days a week with the opening of trade shows. The consensus seemed to be skating and hockey was fine but most were "dead set" against trade and other shows. One resident querried what would happen when construction on the Town Center project gets underway, adding to traffic woes on Main Street.

Many spoke in favor of allowing more children to use the rink.

"Ninety eight percent of the children in Wilmington can't use the rink...they should have known this when they built it," said Marlene Eastman, referring to spiraling liability costs. When Ristuccia explained liability insurance on the building "strictly prohibits public skating," Eastman said "if you don't join a club or pay money, these kids can't skate."

MacDonald suggested residents contact the Wilmington Recreation Department and start a "grassroots movement" to get public skating time.

Bill Hooper read a letter from the planning board asking the appeals board to continue indefinitely until a new site plan conforming to requirements is received. The one submitted in December didn't show enough parking spaces. When Ristuccia said he brought in a new plan showing "sufficient" parking that morning, Hooper said the planning board hadn't seen it. The plan reportedly shows 430 parking spaces.

One resident asked the board to "go a little slow on this instead of giving carte blanche." He suggested members hold a public hearing to address each accessory use and was promised that the board "might consider that."

"We should have some control in our town and what things to bring into our town," said Ron Colbert, explaining that citizens have no way of knowing what's allowed because the special permit is too general. Later, he persisted that the board "take into consideration the townspeople first."

Al Melanson, co-chairman of Monday's exhibition game, praised the Ristuccia family for helping to raise $14,000 to aid a paralyzed youth. He suggested neighbors think of "the end result" of the game and not the "inconvenience" to residents. Noting some hostility to the Ristuccias, Melanson asked that those present try to work together to find a solution rather than become angry with the family.

At one point in the hour long discussion, Ristuccia vented his frustration. "I feel like I'm on trial for having a rink for Wilmington and I don't appreciate this," he said, leading Eastman to reply "It's still our town, not Ben Ristuccia's."

MacDonald promised to notify the public of any future discussion on the special permit.

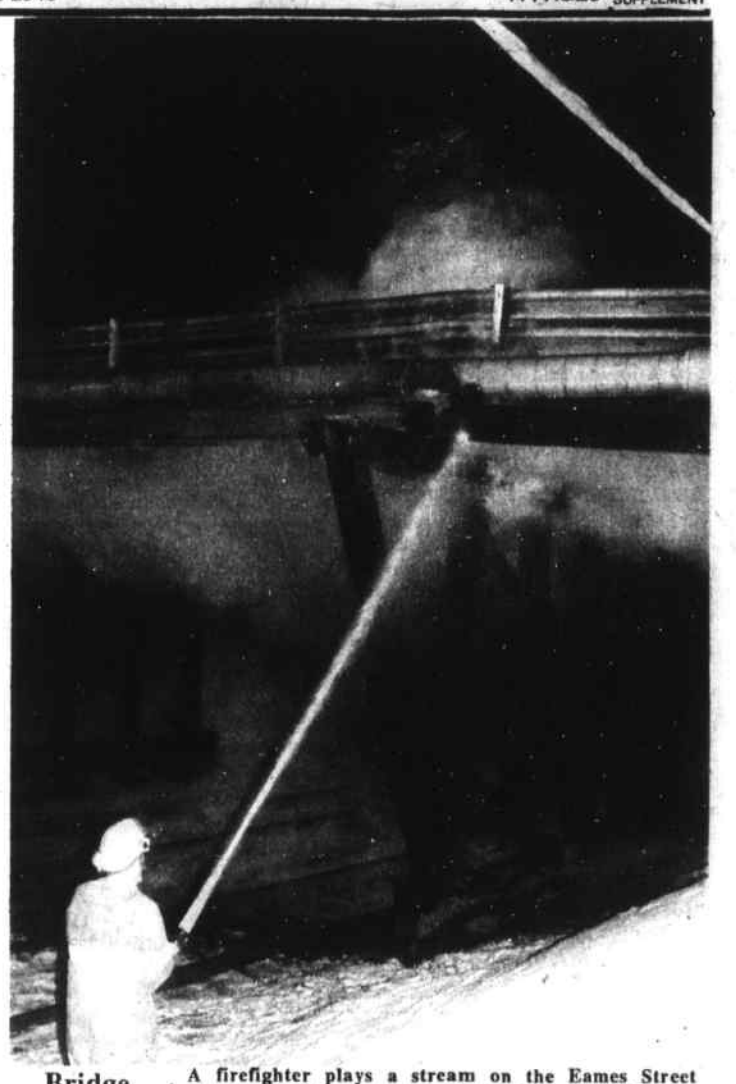

Two more candidates for school committee

Two newcomers have entered the race for the two year school committee seat left vacant by the late Mitchell Spiris.

Gerald O'Reilly of Wildwood Street and Michael J. Thomas of Federal Street have recently pulled papers for that seat. Also in the running is James Babineau of McDonald Road.

Spiris' daughter Suzanne Cushing withdrew from the race Monday night. She told selectmen she is still interested, however, in filling the position for the six weeks prior to the April general election as a "personal tribute" to her father.

Both the board of selectmen and the Wilmington School Committee will hold a joint meeting in town hall tonight (Wednesday) at 7;30 p.m. to appoint someone to fill the position.

Bridge fire

Eames Street bridge closed after fire; arson suspected

The Eames Street bridge has again been closed, this time because of arson. A fire of suspicious origin not only closed the bridge early Friday morning, but also burned a fiber-optic telephone cable.

It was the second time in two months that the bridge has been closed. A trailer aboard a freight train hit the bridge on Dec. 18, splintering many of the timbers.

The fire was reported by a security guard at Analog Devices on Woburn Street at 3:26 a.m. He reported that the Pepsi plant was afire. As he crossed the Town Farm bridge on Route 38, Lt. Eddie Corcoran could see the flames on the Eames Street bridge. When firefighters arrived on the scene, the bridge was fully involved.

It's YOUR Money

by Joyce Brisbois

HOME EQUITY LOANS -- YES OR NO?

Under the new tax law which does away with the deduction of consumer credit costs, home equity loans look extra attractive as a way to get cash for any purpose. The rates are lower than most consumer loans and the interest you pay may be deductible. Should you consider such a lone? Yes, if you need a chunk of cash for major home improvements, for tuition or medical bills, or even to start a new business. But no, not for ordinary, casual credit purchases. The cost is too great.

Consider that the startup fees are sizeable to set up a line of credit, the loan rates are variable and usually without a cap -- and you risk losing your house.

Keep in mind the tax law's limit on the deductibility of home mortgage interest: loans are limited to no more than your initial purchase price of the house, plus any improvements, unless the money is used expressly for educational or medical costs.

Consultant makes recommendations to Wilmington selectmen

by Arlene Surprenant

Holding weekly staff meetings of town department heads and simplifying the building permit process were only two recommendations made by municipal consultant Richard Brown of Bedford Monday night.

Since last November, Brown has interviewed approximately 30 town employees, appointees, and elected officials at the town manager's request to discover how to get various departments and boards to work together more efficiently. He also researched ways to streamline the permit process and improve the engineering department and staffing needs.

Brown reported his findings on the community development agencies (those boards, such as the planning board and board of health, which interface with the building department) to Wilmington selectmen at their meeting this week.

Brown divided his report into recommendations and general impressions.

He praised the "positive attitude" of employees, saying "everyone works hard to make the system work," Brown said the town manager needs to be free to work more closely with town boards on a daily basis and the board of appeals has too many requests for variances. In addition, most people he talked to agreed the permit process was difficult and time consuming for the average homeowner, though this was not necessarily true for builders and contractors.

Brown offered solutions which were simple and to the point.

One of his major recommendtions was to keep permit applications in town hall and have representatives of the various departments come in and sign off the work. Currently, homeowners have to go from one department to another to obtain the necessary signatures. This Brown found to be time consuming and unfair to residents who sometimes have to take time off from work to complete the process.

A second recommendation Brown felt was important was to hold weekly meetings with department heads and the town manager to discuss common problems, improve general communication, and review various permits at one forum.

Other recommendations included filling the Wiring Inspector vacancy to free the Building Inspector from having to do two jobs; exploring the possibility of joint hearings by the Conservation Commission and the planning board; and equipping town vehicles with two way radios.

To improve the engineering department, Brown suggested locating it in the town hall and making it a division of the Department of Public Works. He said the town manager should fill the town engineer position as soon as possible and create a modified senior engineer position to be a contact person with other boards and to assist residents.

After hearing the recommendations, selectmen said they will review the report and suggestions with an eye to implementing them as soon as possible.

New logo

The remains of the old Tewksbury Holiday Inn sign lie crumpled on a trailer on Main Street recently, after the sign was replaced with the new corporate logo. John Gallagher, manager of the Main Street motel, said the old sign was one of the last of its kind remaining in New England.

Extension granted for apartment developer

Wilmington Board of Appeals chairman Bruce MacDonald confirmed Tuesday that the Investors Management Group (IMG) asked for and received a second extension of time before coming back to seek a comprehensive permit.

The permit, if granted, would give town board approval to a large mixed rental apartment complex to be located off Ballardvale Street in North Wilmington. Officials have also said it would afford the town a measure of control over the project.

MacDonald said IMG was granted an extension until April 27. Reportedly, the extra time would allow the developer to collect more information on sewer design and look into a pumping station.

At Monday's selectmen meeting, Jim Stewart questioned whether the delay was in the best interests of the town. He told fellow board members the extension places an "undue burden" on residents in the area.

According to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, the town cannot impede IMG's investigation into the town's sewer system.

License granted for flammables

Polymer Technology Corp of Research Drive was granted a license to store 500 gallons of flammable liquid above ground in a cinder block room. The approval came from the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday following an on site inspection and recommendation of the fire department.

The company, which recently moved across town and deals in contact lens material, will store such liquids as acetone and some hazardous wastes at its facility.

Architect chosen for second phase of renovations

An architect has been selected for further renovation work at Wilmington High School. The Permanent Building Committee Monday night selected the Boston firm of Knight, Bagge and Anderson.

The choice was made by the committee after interviewing two bidders in a meeting held in the high school.

The other bidder was ZNA Associates of Cambridge, which bid $59,600 plus $3760 for printing.

Knight, Bagge and Anderson bid $60,000.

The work will include replacement of the original windows in the building, refurbishing the boilers, improvements to the auditorium, new bleachers for the football field, and possibly a TV studio.

There is $600,000 available for the work. The town meeting voted $1.25 million for the second phase of improvements, but some of the improvements were then incorporated into phase one.

Committee member Diane Allan said that items such as roof repairs, refurbishing lockers and installation of a moveable wall in the new gym were taken care of with change orders under phase one. The roof repairs and lockers are already completed.

The Knight, Bagge firm presented itself before the committee as a project team, with principal Francis Bagge, project manager Kevin Buckley, project engineer Michael Roache of Fay, Spofford & Thorndike, and George Spinney, and engineer with Kimball HVAC.

Roache and Spinney are both Wilmington residents.

Spinney had made a preliminary inspection of the boilers. He told the committee that there was work to be done, and that it may be a lot. But not having inspected the entire system, he couldn't estimate how much work would be involved.

Bagge told the committee that if they were to do all five of the items listed, they would need "a multiple of that amount."

"In fact, you could spend it all on the boilers," Bagge said.

He also said that the job did not call for a full-time clerk of the works. "You'd end up paying the clerk of the works more than the architect," he said.

Buckley, a resident of Burlington, is to attend job meetings, along with Roache and Spinney. But the nature of the job is such that there will be periods when there is no ongoing work on site, such as while the window replacements are being manufactured.

The architectural end of the project is estimated to take ten months from the signing of the contract.

Jeff Murphy to play in national conference

by Arlene Surprenant

Jeff Murphy of Gunderson Road is a gifted musician with a long list of accomplishments to his credit. Though he's only a junior in high school, Jeff has worked hard and had the support of some special people as he's striven to attain a measure of success.

Jeff is a percussionist equally comfortable with classical music, traditional tunes, rock, and jazz. He's studied piano with May Bliss and become proficient in tympani, snare drums, and mallets under private teachers Harvey Simons and Gary Spellissey and Dominic DiGrazia and Barbara Mette of the Wilmington School system.

Just recently, Jeff was the first musician ever chosen from Wilmington to play with the All-Eastern Division Orchestra. On March 6, he will travel to Baltimore with Miss Mette and proud parents, Joseph and Catherine, to play in the orchestra at the three day Music Educators National Conference.

Members for the All-Eastern Orchestra are chosen every two years from 13 coastal states. To be considered, students send in resumes on their past experience and achievements. This year, Jeff was only one of two students from Massachusetts who made All-Eastern.

Those who know Jeff are not surprised he was chosen for this honor. The young man has been a member of the Junior District Band in junior high, the Northeast Senior District Band for two years, and the All-State Orchestra for two years. He also auditioned for and was accepted into the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra (GBYSO) in 1986. This last keeps him busy on Sundays as he travels to the School of Fine Arts in Boston to practice with the orchestra then play in the percussion ensemble at night.

Jeff originally got involved in music when he was in elementary school.

"It was a neighborhood thing," he says, explaining that he became interested because others in his neighborhood were all playing instruments. He tried out on tympani in third grade at the Woburn Street School. He then moved on to snare drums in the eighth grade and was told he had "a good ear" for music.

Some of his talent may be inherited from his mom, who plays piano; sister Lynne, who is an "excellent" singer; and brother Brian, who sings, acts, and plays bass guitar and piano. His family, including his dad and older brother Joe, an officer in the Navy, also provide support and encouragement.

Jeff divides much of his time between his music and athletics. At Wilmington High School he enjoys playing in the band and jazz rock ensemble and he is presently coach of the percussion section. He is also a member of Fallout, a local rock quintet.

Jeff followed the lead of his older brothers in the pursuit of athletics. He is currently on the JV basketball team and, in the past, was in Little League, played golf, was a second baseman on the school baseball team, and ran cross country. No slouch in academics, Jeff says he currently ranks seventh in a class of 225 students.

"I find it kind of helps me if I have a lot to do," Jeff says in what must be the understatement of the year. This quiet young man says he finds little time to pursue other interests, though he does enjoy listening to Van Halen and Rush as well as his mom's collection of Buddy Rich albums and being a member of DECA at school. Jeff says he's learned "you can't be good at everything" and he's often reminded "to go with your strengths."

With so many demands on his time, Jeff is starting to make some hard choices. He explains, for instance, playing in the All-State concert last year was a determining factor in his decision to continue his pursuit of music.

"Playing with that caliber was incredible; after that I just wanted to keep playing," he recalls, explaining that he still listens to the unforgettable rendition of "Night on Bald Mountain" from the same concert.

Jeff's future looks bright. He recently made a tape to apply for the Interlaken Music Camp in Michigan. Though he admits trying out for the eight week camp is "a long shot," if accepted, he would be eligible for one of 50 $2,400 scholarships. He would also have a chance to play in a concert for all the state governors as well as the President of the United States.

Jeff is still exploring career opportunities and discussing his pursuit of music with others who are more knowledgeable. He is considering applications to Berkeley College of Music, the New England Conservatory, and Boston University. More immediately, he will try out for the upcoming school musical Godspell.

Does he have any words of advice for others who may wish to follow in his footsteps?

"You have to be dedicated, not only in music but all around. You have to keep up with your schoolwork. As long as you have excellent study habits, you can go into other areas and not have to worry." Thoughtful words from one young man who is not afraid to take his own advice.

Jeff Murphy

Duggan to perform

Wilmington resident Frank Duggan will perform with Maureen Leombruno-Boudrow and the Body Language Dancers this Saturday, Feb. 28 at the Tenney Middle School, Pleasant Street in Methuen. Both Frank and Maureen made their television debut on Dance Fever last October.

The Body Language Dancers will perform "Signdance," a new concept combining the enjoyment of dance and music with sign interpretation for the hearing-impaired.

Tickets for the performance are $6 and may be purchased at the door or by calling Frank at 932-3614.

ACT NOW!

For many, the 1986 IRA contribution will be their LAST CHANCE for full deductibility!

STARTING WITH THE 1987 TAX YEAR...

A person filing an individual return with an adjusted gross income of less than $25,000, and a couple filing a joint return with an adjusted gross income of less than $40,000, can continue to make deductible IRA contributions. Deductibility will then phase out for individuals with incomes between $25,000 and $35,000, and for couples with incomes between $40,000 and $50,000. For example, a married worker with an adjusted gross of $45,000, making an IRA contribution of $2,000, will be able to deduct only $1,000 instead of the full $2,000.

In all cases, the tax-deferred status of IRA investment appreciation remains. Those who are not permitted by the rules to make deductible contributions will still be permitted after-tax contributions to take advantage of the IRA's internal tax-deferred appreciation.

So, if you don't have an IRA, it will pay you to go to your nearest Lowell Five office to open one. And if you have an IRA, be sure you make your 1986 contribution.

Dear Larz:

"Podunk" is probably the kindest thing you can say to describe what has happened to the character of Wilmington. By the destruction of older homes such as the Webber's we are selling out the heritage and soul of the town to the curb-act specialists such as the destroyer of the Webber home.

You said this land is too valuable to remain as farm land and house lots. I say you are totally incorrect. It is far too valuable to chop into a collection of dinky retail stores and second rate office space. This is strip zoning at its worst.

These should be called strip joints and the developers strip joint operators.

This callous destruction goes hand in glove with the obvious abhorrence of the town fathers of anything that smacks of heritage preservation. Why would the town manager otherwise refuse and blatantly ignore the directive of the town meeting and refuse to hire a conservation commission chairman who could devote full time to stopping this nonsense?

The arrogance of the water commissioner who ignored another town meeting directive to purchase the old Lowell Cranberry Co. bog after the town meeting ordered that done is another similar example. They said it was a working bog and too expensive. Working bog my fat cranberry!! The only work done there in years has been by turtles, muskrats and geese!

Now the same developer who likes to replace old homes with sub shops has purchased this land that the town was supposed to purchase and wants to put houses on it. Houses in a cranberry bog? In wetland? Bordering on Ipswich River headwaters and a town wellfield?

Nice going town manager. Attaboy water commissioners. Keep it up. We'll have 18 square miles of hot-top that ought to make you ecstatic!

William MacKinnon

Dear Larz:

Three weeks ago Wilmington lost a truly great educator with its loss of Mitch Spiris. Mitch always had the best interest of "his" students first at hand. Some people hear but Mitch truly listened, some people see but Mitch looked toward the future.

A lot of people care but Mitch's caring was unselfish and came not from his head but from deep in his heart. We will never be able to bring back the man we so looked up to. So comes the time that we must go on the way he would have wanted us to, giving the children of this town the quality education they deserve. The task of filling his shoes isn't hard when you have met the person who shared his dreams of better education for our children, who worked closely with her father on educational issues and who shows the kind of devotion and caring to the students, parents, and staff of Wilmington Public Schools.

This is why I would like to see Suzi Spiris Cushing sitting in her father's seat in the weeks that remain before the election. I can't express in words how this would have pleased Mitch. I just prefer to picture him with that warm, dignified smile, being so proud of the daughter he educated so well.

Sincerely,
Linda Scifo

Dear Tewksbury Voter:

We recently celebrated the 250th anniversary of the founding of our town. Our town endured the trials and hardships of other early settlements, and was quick to respond with volunteers during the War of the Revolution. We believe that Tewksbury can justly claim a full and honorable share of our colonial heritage.

Many towns identify their historic buildings with plaques or signs. We believe that these signs would increase awareness and appreciation of our town's history, and help connect us with our past. We are grateful for your support of our proposal.

Sincerely,
The Tewksbury Preservation Alliance

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Last week Cuomo said 'No, no' and Dukakis said 'Lets wait and see.' But in the aftermath of the surprising decision by New York Democrat Mario Cuomo to bow out of the '88 democratic contest, our own 'Duke' will be under increasing pressure to make his intentions known now that his greatest obstacle to 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. has now been removed.

Many analysts concluded that the New York governor's decision was strictly a personal one, while others contended that he knew he wouldn't have won the nomination. The latter group is quite mistaken. Cuomo offered not only the strength of an ethnic candidate, but specifically that of an Italian. Italian - Americans represent a success story in America worthy of mention, and Cuomo was the Italian who came from an industrial northeastern state, with a monumental electoral vote.

But for Mario, this was not the year to be dissected under a microscope, as had his old friend and fellow New Yorker Gerry Ferraro. His most recent reelection bid for the Governor's Mansion was marked by a few emotional episodes between him and the press, which left many examining his ability to deal with the stressful nature of a national candidacy. In fact, the charismatic governor decided that the potential scrutiny of the press just wasn't worth it this time around.

So when Mike Dukakis got off the plane in Washington last week and got the news that Mario would be spending a little more time in Albany, he had all he could do to keep himself from screaming for joy. Watching him respond to the reporters' questions in his usual sedate manner was like seeing someone remain calm after winning mega-bucks.

With Cuomo's decision, Dukakis now becomes the only standard bearer for the Northeast, and an ethnic in his own right. His reputation among the Democratic governors seems high, and his own organization remains quite capable of raising vast sums of money. In the end it is that last factor which will be critical in his decision making. So what's your pleasure, Michael?

Well, that's a question that a lot of people are now going to expect an answer to, and perhaps a little more quickly than before, in light of the Cuomo decision. The reason for this is that you can only successfully tantalize an electorate for so long, even here in Massachusetts. And with his biggest geographical opposition out of the way, Dukakis now has only one consideration to make before throwing his hat into the ring; the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Members of the minority party in the state have already begun to attack the governor for considering a presidential run with a State House full of policy issues awaiting careful attention. Subsequently, the worst thing that could happen to the Duke would be to suffer any political embarrassments in his backyard while trouncing the corn fields of Iowa. As a result, the big consultation going on at the hotel suite in Washington right now is how to take that big political step forward, and still mind the store. And a big factor here is going to be one by the name of Evelyn Murphy.

Dukakis can successfully spend a lot of time outside the Bay State, but only with the right man at the helm--or woman. The choice has to be Murphy, in her constitutional role as Lt. Governor. And it will do all our hearts some good to finally see that position serve some practical purpose. That is to say, the only reason for having a lieutenant governor is if A) You want to be U. S. Senator, or B) Dukakis decides to run for president.

As a result, the Duke is bound to toss the old hat in by the end of next month, and Murphy will have that golden opportunity in politics to prove she has the 'right stuff' to be the next Massachusetts governor in 1990. This edge for Evelyn toward her 1990 candidacy is not about to be such welcome news for others eyeing the governor's chair such as Shannon, Atkins, and former Auditor Finnegan. As for Dukakis, he will have an uphill battle in the west and south, where his name recognition will be substantially limited, and his political philosophy might be a little foreign to the electorate.

But who knows. Maybe, just maybe, he'll win the Massachusetts primary.

25 years ago

The March 1, 1962 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

On Friday, Mar. 2 at 10 a.m., Guild Plastics, Inc., would begin interviewing "female applicants" for positions as packers in the new plant at the intersection of Route 38 and 62. Interested women were advised to apply in person to Mr. Tufenkjian.

Irked by cans and other trash being dropped in front of two homes on lower Main Street, by people on their way to the dump, the Board of health proposed asking that Old Main Street be made one way with entry near the Woburn line only. Most of the trouble, it was alleged, came from trucks transporting material from local business firms.

A three bedroom house with one and a half baths, modern kitchen, on a half acre lot, near the high school was advertised for $15,500.

A sub-committee was appointed by the planning board to study proposed changes in the zoning bylaws. Charles Fogg would be chairman, assisted by Mrs. Jean Gifford and Herbert Nickerson.

Louise Wallent, a member of the North Wilmington Merchants Bowling League, held second place both in the womens' high single with 158 and womens' high triple, with 394.

There were 5571 voters registered and eligible to vote in Wilmington - down about 300 from the last Presidential election.

A half page ad from the board of health including Marion Boylen, Gerald Fagan, M.D., Erving Pfau and Chairman A.C. Walker tried to "set the record straight" on fluoridation and urged voters not to be "influenced by the scare tactics of a group of people, the vast majority of whom do not live or work in Wilmington."

School Committee candidates included M. Flora Kasabuski, James Paglia, Glen Connolly and Ed Page.

Suzi's Sonnets:

"The Olymnpians watched,
bemused,
as mere men above
them cruised.
Poor Apollo
Had to follow
Colonel Glenn with ego bruised."

A dining guide for hostages

Gramp Wiley was visibly shaken. Without saying a word, he handed me a newspaper and pointed at an all too common headline: Hostage Taken at Gunpoint.

I started to read the article, and exclaimed, "Why the hostage was taken to Moody's Diner right here in town. This is terrible."

Gramp nodded. "Terrible is the only word for it. If I had a hostage I'd take him to Dave's Diner. Not that there's anything wrong with the food at Moody's. Bill and Alvah, who take turns cooking over there, do a great job. For years I'd go in there every noon and climb on one of those old round stools by the counter and the waitress would just automatically put a hot turkey sandwich in front of me. After three or four years of hot turkey sandwiches five days a week, one day I walked in the door and hollered, 'Edna, hold that hot turkey sandwich.' Oh they were good, but after a thousand of them I thought I'd try something else.

"Dave's has got a salad bar and Moody's hasn't, which means you're talking about two different kinds of restaurants right there."

"You can't compare apples and oranges," I said.

I'm not talking about your old run of the mill salad bar, you know. Dave's has green olives right out there where you can get at them. Anyone planning on taking a hostage to a restaurant should keep that in mind."

I said, "Up on the richer end of the country, hostages would be taken to Peter Ott's or the Waterfront."

Gramp Wiley made an ugly face. "If I were the hostage I'd still ask them to put me in the trunk and bring me down to Dave's. You've got to see their salad bar to believe it."

"Have you had the fish chowder at the Coffee Shop on Main Street?" I asked. "The first time I had it, there were lots of chunks of something I'd never seen before in with the potatoes so I called the waitress over to ask about it. She told me it was the fish. Best dinner in the country for any money."

Gramp said, "I'm glad you mentioned chowder. Because of an obvious trend, I've started a Dining Guide for Hostages.

"There's no reason it shouldn't be done right," I said.

"Imagine a sharp knock on your door in the middle of the night. From out on the porch a threatening voice says, 'You deserve a break today.'"

"'We do it your way,'" I added.

"Before taking a hostage to a restaurant, one should call ahead for reservations. Especially in the evenings in August. My Guide would smooth the way for potential hostage takers. In the past, hostage takers have been embarrassed to discover that local zoning prohibits the discharge of firearms."

"Your guides should also include diagrams of all exits," I said. "Does the men's room have a window that opens on an alley?"

Gramp Wiley scribbled furiously.

"Make estimations of traffic patterns and conditions. Getting away in downtown traffic could be complicated at 2 a.m. Can furniture be used to barricade doors?"

"I've already got that one," my neighbor cried. "Telephones are important, too. Imagine being in a restaurant with your hostage only to discover that it doesn't have a phone and you're unable to make your demands known to the police outside."

"Make sure the police are outside," I said. "It would be just my luck to bring a hostage to a Police Association Awards Banquet."

Gramp said, "Last but not least, make provisions ahead for payment. Otherwise there is likely to be unnecessary tension when a smiling waitress approaches your table and asks, 'One check or two?'"

Students take to the slopes after school

by Frank Bonfilio

On February, 23, seventh and eighth grade students from the North Intermedate School participated in a ski trip to Bradford Hill in Haverhill.

This trip is part of a program which was started 16 years ago by teacher Bill Peabody. Peabody, a certified ski instructor, started the program for the youths in the Wilmington school system as a extra ciricular activity.

Three years into the program Peabody recieved help from fellow teacher Frank Birmingham. Also accompaning the group on the trips is a registered nurse and parent chaperones.

The program gives students a chance to go skiing during the middle of the week instead of just going on the weekends or on vactions.

Peabody feels that this offers a relief valve for students who occasonally get into slumps in the winter months. He also feels that this is a good way to improve the relationship between the students and the teachers.

The first part of a three part program is instructional, running for six weeks. For $62.50, the participant receives; lessons from professional ski instructors, lift tickets, and bus transportation to and from the mountain. For the skier who does not own equipment rentals are avaible at an additional cost of $39.

The other two parts offered are Friday night ski trips to such places as Crochet and Temple Mountain. And the third part includes over night trips to Sunday River in Maine.

A special part will be a family night which will be held on March, 6. Birmingham and Peabody both feel that this will be an excellent opportunity for the teachers, students and their parents meet other than in a classroom sitiuation.

The young skiers really enjoy the program. "It helped me to learn how to parallel", said Kenny Blowers a seventh grader at the North Intermedate school and Cara Scalesse, a eighth grader at North Intermedate, and a second-year veteran of the program said "I think it's great."

Both Peabody and Birmingham enjoy running the program and have an excellent reputation with the Wilmington school system and the parents of the students who are involved.

"Solomon" revealed

The Tewksbury editorial in last week's Town Crier has prompted the author of the letter to come forth.

Ollie Jones, a Tewksbury resident and an officer in the Shawsheen Watershed Environmental Action Team (S.W.E.A.T.) admitting to writing the letter to the editor which described a possible D.A.V. compromise.

Ollie's suggestion was for the D.A.V. to break up their 5-acre parcel of land on Pond Street into individual acre house lots, which could then be sold. The money from the lots, Ollie suggested, could be used to purchase a commercially-zoned property for the veteran's headquarters.

Tewksbury Planning Director Charles Frederiksen, however, had another point to add to the editorial.

The selling price of the house lots, given in the editorial as $45,000 each, was quite low, Frederiksen said. Based on his personal observations, he said, each of the lots could be sold for about $100,000 each, perhaps more.

Monday's edition of the Boston Globe, in fact, held an advertisement for house lots in another part of Tewksbury with an asking price of $134,000 each. The lots advertised in the Globe, however, were only a half-acre apiece!

So, the possible money to be raised from the sale of the D.A.V.'s land continues to increase, at least on paper.

Ollie's proposal continues to sound better. Thank you, Mr. Jones.

Troop 136

Boy Scouts of Troop 136 Wilmington, sponsored by Post 136, American Legion, lost all their property in the Legion Hall fire of February 17. Rear row: Asst. Scoutmaster Frank Palazzi, SPL Sean Mahoney, Junior Asst. Scoutmaster Dave Hartka, Scribe Kevin Yetman, Eagle Scout Chris Sullivan, Scout Coordinator Philip Fenton, Asst. Sen. Patrol Leader Richard Whitney.

Scout troop had a home at Legion Hall

Tom MacFeeley, Scoutmaster of Troop 136 has an honest derivation for the title of Scoutmaster, in Wilmington.

One of the finest Scouts ever to live in Wilmington was Dudley Buck of Birchwood Road. He was Dr. Dudley Buck of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Lincoln Laboratories. He was the inventor of the first electronic transistor, which was shown in a full page by Life Magazine about 1953.

Dudley Buck was Scoutmaster of Troop 56, Wilmington's oldest troop. He was also a member of the Wilmington School Committee and a deacon in the United Methodist Church.

When Dudley Buck suddenly passed away there was no Scoutmaster. Angus MacFeeley of Burnap Street, a World War I veteran, took over. Angus will be remembered as the man who always marched in the Memorial Day parade, even after he was 85 years old. He never missed.

He was Scoutmaster of Troop 56 for several years. At that time the troop was sponsored by "a group of citizens." After a while he retired from Boy Scouts.

Angus, a member of the American Legion for perhaps 40 years then, was an active man. Not only Boy Scouts, he was active in Girl Scouts, the Catholic Daughters of America, and the various fund raising activities of St. Dorothy's Church.

After he had retired from Troop 56 the Comrades of the American Legion began to talk about sponsoring a troop. Naturally Past Commander Angus MacFeeley was named Scouting Coordinator, to represent the post. The new troop was started in November 1970. Angus was not alone. Probably a dozen Legionnaires started Troop 136 and Cub Scout Pack 136.

Scoutmaster, in those first few days and ever since, was one of the sons of Angus, Tom MacFeeley, also a member of Post 136, A.L. He is still the Scoutmaster and is able to recall with pleasure the days of Scoutmaster Dudley Buck.

Scout Troop 136 has won a number of awards from the American Legion. In 1972, for the first time, it won the state wide Camporee contest. Since then, in the intervening years, it has won that award four more times.

The trophy, unfortunately, was destroyed in the Legion fire of February 17.

All the awards were burned in that fire.

Scout Troop 136 and Cub Pack 136 won many awards in the past 17 years. There were too many, in one sense, to remember. The many trophies and ribbons were kept in the club room of the Legion. The members of Post 136 were proud of their proteges, and wanted the trophies to always be on display.

It was a case of mutual admiration between the Legionnaires and the Scouts and Cubs they sponsored. And between Pack 136 and Troop 136, about 80 families in Wilmington have younger members in the Scouting movement.

Through the years this has continued. When it came time to clean up the parking lot the Scouts were there. When it came time to tender support, at Scouting events, the Legionnaires were there. Young scouts in need also got support from the Post, and the troop and pack had an unlimited use of that building.

Tom MacFeeley is glad to say that his Scout Troop, which he has led for 16 years, is just as supportive of the American Legion. Somehow, in the months to come, Scout troop 136 and Cub Scout Pack 136 are going to do their part for American Legion Post 136, as it rebuilds.

Land swap for Legion Hall?

by Arlene Surprenant

American Legion Post 136, one of the oldest organizations in Wilmington, is seeking a new home. A recent late night fire destroyed the old Legion Hall, home of two cub packs and boy scout troops, the Marine Corps League, and the Royal Canadian Legion Post 177 as well as the veterans organization.

A large contingent of interested citizens sought the help of Wilmington selectmen Monday in the rebuilding process. Legion members proposed that selectmen sponsor an article for them at the annual town meeting. The article would allow a swap of present property at Adams Street and Middlesex Avenue for three to four acres of town owned land on South Main Street for new quarters.

Selectmen agreed to get input from the planning board and the engineering department. If the proposal is feasible, Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski was instructed to have Town Counsel draft an article for town meeting and to look into a possible amendment to the three year moratorium on town owned land.

Anastasia McInnis, Post Commander, told selectmen though they are in "desperate circumstances," they are "not letting this tragedy that hit us interfere with our programs." Members are looking into temporary quarters at the Wilmington Grange Hall, said McInnis, and are hoping to use Town Common for a Legion Day one Saturday in May. When she explained they are going to demolish the charred remains of the building as soon as possible, selectmen suggested members secure the building and explore ways to reduce the reported $25,000 cost to take down the building before taking the final step.

"We do a tremendous amount of work which is not seen nor heard," added McInnis. She pointed out that Legion members help out at Bedford Hospital and the Soldiers Home in Chelsea, they provided four college scholarships last year, and paid for several scouts at camp, among other worthwhile projects.

Phil Fenton, Scouting Coordinator for the scout groups sponsored by the American Legion, praised the veterans for their concern for the boys in his care. He told selectmen the scouts will hold meetings temporarily at St. Thomas' Church. A benefit dance is being planned for March 20 at the Sons of Italy Hall to raise funds for replacement of equipment lost in the fire, Fenton said, adding any resident wishing to contribute may send donations to the Commercial Bank and Trust Co. care of Boy Scout Troop 136.

"We're going to make it but we need your support," said Fenton as he and McInnis thanked selectmen for their help.

Arts center seeks members and equipment

The Wilmington Council for the Arts had a dream which is now becoming a reality. Their ultimate goal has been to have a cultural center for the town. Since its inception seven years ago, the council has been looking forward to the eventual opening of such a place, whether it be a group of rooms or a building of their own.

With the new opening of the old town hall, what better place could be utilized than the old Wilmington Town Hall building?

The council members are very pleased to be renting this building and are hard at work preparing it for the benefit of the townspeople, and their artistic endeavors.

Three members who have been on the council since its beginning, are especially excited.

It will be a long, slow process to complete the work necessary but the wait will be worth it when the building is involved with all forms of art, music and drama.

Equipment is still a much needed item such as work tables, desks, chairs and office equipment (furniture).

Money voted at the annual town meeting and some granted by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council, has helped pay for heat, electricity, insurance, installation of a telephone and some furniture. Other items are needed.

Anyone with the above items willing to donate them to this cause, please call chairman Dan Ballou at 657-4817.

Membership is also important and should you be interested in joining its other membership on the council there are always openings for willing and interested new members. If so call Dan at the above number.

PRAYER TO ST. JUDE

Most holy apostle, St Jude, faithful servant and friend of Jesus, the Church honors and invokes you universally, as the patron of hopeless cases, of things almost despaired of. Pray for me, I am so helpless and alone. Make use I implore you, of that particular privilage give to you, to bring visible and speedy help where help is almost despaired of. Come to my assistance in this great need that I may receive the consolation and help of hevean in all my necessities, tribulations, and sufferings, particularly – (Here make your request) and that I may praise God with you and all the elect forever. I promise, O blessed St. Jude, to be ever mindful of this great favor, to always honor you as my special and powerful patron, and to gratefully encourage devotion to you. Amen.

Consultant sought for Wilmington Drug Alliance

by Arlene Surprenant

Members of the Wilmington Drug Alliance agreed Tuesday to pursue hiring a consultant who would offer objective ways to continue the battle against chemical abuse and help members decide where they will go from here.

Health Director Greg Erickson said their first few months in existensce should be looked on as "a learning process." Now, he said, they should "start to put everybody's needs on the table" and develop a program which would be recognized and partially funded by the state and federal governments.

Selectman Rocco DePasquale, who stepped down as chairman to be temporarily replaced by Erickson, said the committee needs to decide on a long term agenda. After the meeting, he told the Town Crier the committee will stay intact at least until a consultant is hired and evaluate the town's needs.

During the meeting, a four member sub-committee was formed to look into possible candidates for the consultant's position. The consultant will be chosen by the Town Manager. The committee also agreed to prepare a list of services available in Wilmington and neighboring towns. They anticipate using a directory of Community Information Services provided by Anne Linehan.

Lions Club eye sceening

It was a successful eye screening by the members of the Lions Club of Wilmington and the Burlington Eye Associates. It was part of a two day public health event. Included was a pediatric screening on Saturday morning, a diabetic screening on Saturday afternoon, and a glaucoma screening on Sunday afternoon.

The 25 members of the Lions Club were busy, so busy that some Rotarians dropped in to help them out. The two day event was held at the Regional Health Center, on Route 62 in Wilmington.

About 150 visitors participated in the tests. One girl, four years old, was found to be afflicted with dyslexia, and two children were found to have lazy eyes.

Mr. Snow, 73 years of age, was born in Cambridge, lived there during his younger years and later in Arlington prior to moving to Woburn 32 years ago.

He served as a truck driver for H.P. Hood & Son Company for over 40 years prior to retirement.

Mr. Snow is survived by his wife, Mrs. Beatrice M. (Benoit) Snow; his two daughters, Mrs. Lorraine J. Pellerin of Wilmington, Ms. Eileen A. Snow of Salem, N.H.; his two sons, Frank E. Snow of Nashua, N.H. and Thomas C. Snow of Tewksbury; his brother, Edward Snow of Woburn; his three sisters, Mrs. Esther Daly and Mrs. Clara Boudreau of Somerville and Mrs. Georgianna Rizzo of Arlington; also 13 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. He was also the father of the late Judith Moore.

The funeral will be held from the W.S. Cavanaugh & Son Funeral Home, 374 Main St., Wilmington Thursday at 9:00 followed by a Funeral Mass at St. Joseph's Church, East Woburn at 10:00. Interment will take place in Wildwood Cemetery.

Friends may call at the funeral home Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Lillian Homer

Lillian M. Homer, of 39 Gould Rd., Andover, died suddenly on Sunday, February 23, 1987.

Mrs. Homer, 67 years of age, was born in Cambridge, the daughter of the late Daisey M. (Williams) and the late Louis M. Brown. She lived in Winthrop during her younger years and in Wakefield prior to taking up residence in Andover 21 years ago.

Prior to retirement, Mrs. Homer served as a waitress in several area restaurants.

She was the wife of Edward H. Homer, mother of Edward H. Homer of Lowell, Robert Homer of Andover and Mrs. Barbara Livingston of Winthrop; sister of Mrs. Theresa Williams of Cohasset and Mrs. June Carroll of Idaho; she is also survived by seven grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at the W.S. Cavanaugh & Son Funeral Home, 374 Main St., Saturday at 10 a.m. with the Rev. Frank Stiller of the First Baptist Church, Wilmington officiating. Interment will take place in Puritan Lawn Memorial Park, Peabody.

Florence Prindle

Florence G. Prindle (Cheney), a former resident of Middlesex Avenue, Wilmington for many years, died at New England Memorial Hospital, Stoneham after a brief illness.

Born in Wells, Maine, 82 years ago, Mrs. Prindle was the widow of John Parker Prindle and the mother of J. Parker Prindle, Jr. of Boston. Mrs. Prindle made her home in Melrose for the last 10 years.

Mrs. Prindle was a former member of the Wilmington Congregational Church and a member of the Ladies Benevolent Society group of that church. She was also a member of the Wilmington Womens' Club.

Funeral services were held at the Wilmington Congregational Church Saturday, February 21, at 10 a.m. with the Rev. Thomas Dean officiating. Burial was in Wyoming Cemetery, Melrose. Arrangements were by the Nichols Funeral Home of Wilmington.

Entrance exam at Austin Prep

Austin Prep's annual spring entrance exam will be held Saturday morning, March 7 at 8:30. The test will be given at the school, 101 Willow St., Reading. Preregistration for the exam is required. All applicants must take the exam in person at the school.

This entrance exam is for students who wish to apply for openings this September. Applications will be accepted from students who wish to enter the ninth grade, and from transfer students who wish to enter the 10th or 11th grade. The school accepts students of all faiths.

Austin Preparatory School is a private Catholic secondary school which offers a college preparatory curriculum tailored to individual ability levels. Each year over 90 percent of the graduating class enters college. Last year 88 percent were accepted at their first or second choice.

Austin Prep offers college level advance placement courses in several departments. Two years ago a new computer laboratory was dedicated. This new facility is an Acorn Micro computer system with 26 terminals which can be used in a network or independently. The terminals offer dual-language capability, all-color monitors, arcade-quality graphics, and word-processors.

The area prep school also offers extensive extracurricular activities and a program of intramural and interscholastic sports.

Wilmington students to perform with Treble Chorus

The children of the Treble Chorus of New England, recently reviewed as having "voices like angels" yet can also "become a powerful adult chorus" will perform a very special Lenten music concert Sunday,March 8 ,at 4 p.m. at St. Augustine's Catholic Church in Andover. Marie Stultz, artistic director, will conduct this concert which will feature the beautiful "Messe Basse" of Faure, the haunting "Litanies to the Black Virgin" and shorter compositions by Handel, Mozart, Poulenc and Mendelssohn. Accompaniment will be provided by the Indian Hill's Quartet.

Bible Institute slated

Beginning March 8, 1987, The First Baptist Church of Wilmington will conduct its fourth consecutive Evening Bible Institute, Sunday evenings from 6:30 P.M. to 8:00 P.M. at the church's Abundant Life Christian School, 17 Boutwell St. in Wilmington. This six week session will include a course entitled "Science and Christianity...Is There a Conflict?" which will examine evolution vs creation science, social and moral evolution, and other similar topics as presented by layman, Stephen Day. A Baptism and Membership class will also be offered for those interested in what the First Baptist Church believes as a body.

The special focus of this fourth Evening Bible Institute will be "The Layman and Missions" as taught by five outstanding speakers. Dr. William Nigel Kerr, Professor of Church History at Gordon-Conwell Seminary and member of the Board of the Latin American Missions will be the keynote speaker addressing the topic of "The Layman and Missions." Other featured speakers include the Rev. Howard Jacobs, Regional Director of OMS Missions who will speak on "The Layman and Foreign Missions" and the Rev. Milton Friesen, Director of the Kingston House in Boston. The Kingston House provides shelter, food, spiritual guidance and other services for street people and runaways. The Rev. Friesen will teach on "How a Layman Can Minister to Street People and Runaways."

All classes are biblically based and provide the student with a better knowledge of God's Word and deeper insight into victorious Christian living. There is no charge for the course: donations will be accepted.

Registration is now open for this session of the Evening Bible Institute. Please call the church office, 658-8584, for more information or to register.

Wilmington senior topics

Dr. Leavitt

Podiatrist Dr. Leavitt will be at the Center Friday morning beginning at 9:00 to check and treat ailments of the feet. Please have your Medicare, Medex or Medicaid cards with you when you arrive.

Council meets March 2

The March Council on Aging meeting will be held in the function room next Monday March 2 starting at 1:30 p.m. We hope to have a guest speaker after the meeting. He is very knowledgeable on medications and their dangers if not used correctly. He is trying to fit his schedule around our meeting this month. If he cannot he will be here the following month.

Cheese and butter

If you have not picked up your cheese and butter, you may do so this week as long as the supply lasts.

March social

This week will be the last chance to sign up for the March therapeutic social. The corned beef and cabbage dinner will be served at 7 p.m. in the Tewksbury-Wilmington Elks Hall in Tewksbury March 5. Music for the evening will be provided by Jimmy Merrit.

Lunch program

The lunch program has resumed. Any senior who has been confined to his or her home for some time due to disability or a senior returning home after a prolonged hospital stay and living alone may have a meal delivered. Call the center, leaving name, telephone and reason for confinement.

Vial of Life files

We are in the process of updating our vial of life files. The vial of life program is very important; it may save your life. The reason the word vial is placed first is that the form you complete is folded up small and placed into an empty plastic meeicine bottle, taped to the inside of your refrigerator and a heart decal is placed on the tape. Another decal is put onto the refrigerator door. This is to alert the ambulance driver that there is a vial inside to be taken to the hospital with them.

Questions on the form include, your name, telephone number, next of kin, address, doctor's name and telephone number, medical insurance names and numbers, medical problems and medication, where purchased, doses and name of medication. The treatment you receive when admitted to a hospital will depend on the amount of information available to the doctor in the emergency room. Time wasted in finding medical information, especially drugs and doses of medication you are taking or should not be taking may determine your life or death.

By completing the vial of life form now while you are well enough to do so, will be to your advantage. Stop by at the Center and pick one up if you do not have one in your refrigerator now. It is also important to keep the form updated at all times.

Open enrollment

We should have open enrollment forms at the center by the end of the week. The open enrollment will be from the first of March to the end of April. It is for seniors over 65 who did not paply for a Medex policy at that time he or she applied for Social Security or for a person who dropped his/her policy for some reason and went to re-enroll.

Art and painting

We would like to resume the second phase of our art and painting classes, but to do so we will need some beginner artists. Seniors who want to learn to sketch or paint. If you are advanced in sketching or painting as some of our artists in the class are, we will need you also. The advanced artist will be working in the card room on a painting or drawing. These scenes or portraits will be on display in the Center at the end of the classes.

The seniors entering the Center will select the winning picture. The best one will receive a prize. At the therapeutic social in May or June the picture will be on display, but first we have to get enough students to resume our classes.

Social day

Don't forget that every Wednesday we open the funciton room to a senior social day. Beginning at 1 p.m. and continuing to 4:30, there will be piano playing, sing-a-longs and dancing. Coffee and goodies will be served. Come and join the fun, and leave your troubles behind you.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending February 24, Wilmington police officers responded to 21 alarms, a fire, five accidents, two break and entries, made 11 arrests and two protective custody detentions.

Other departments were assisted, six disturbances were investigated, three larcenies were logged and alert neighbors reported four incidents of suspicious activity.

Two domestic problems were quieted, medical assistance was given, one assault and battery was logged and five threat complaints were taken. One traffic complaint along with a trailbike complaint were taken and eight incidents of vandalism are still under investigation.

Arrests

Officer Richter arrested a Lawrence man on motor vehicle charges early Thursday morning. Randall Jackson, 17 of May Street, was charged with operating without a license along with a moving violation.

Friday evening Officer Chris Neville arrested David P. Kelly of Fairway Drive, Derry, N.H., formerly of Woburn Street, Wilmington. Kelly was arrested by virtue of a Reading Police Department warrant and later bailed for Reading to appear in Woburn Court Monday morning.

A Medford man was arrested Friday night by Sgt. Gable and Officer McCue after causing a disturbance at the station. Stephen Carey, 20 of Winchester Place was originally placed under protective custody by Burlington police and brought to Wilmington for a breathalyzer test. He was held in the Wilmington lockup after creating a commotion. He was charged with disorderly conduct and bailed for Monday court.

Saturday morning two men were arrested in separate incidents. Officer LaRivee arrested Thomas Feeney, 17 of Gowing Road, Wilmington charging him with operating with out a license, to wit, violating the restrictions of a junior license.

Officer Jim White arrested a North Reading man after responding to a report of a car in a snow bank at Route 93 and Concord Street. David Lopilato, 27, of Fairview Avenue, was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. He was bailed for a Monday court appearance.

Sunday morning three people were arrested during the midnigh to 8 a.m. shift, two of whom wer charged with drunk driving. At 7 a.m. Officer Richter arreste Kevin McCarthy of Allen Par Drive, Wilmington charging hin with operating under the influence.

At 2:45 a.m., Officer Steve Mauriello arrested Aaron Brown of Brand Avenue, Wilmington charging him with operating under the influence.

A third arrest was of Brendan Kelly, 831 Main Street, by Officers Shepard and Richter on the basis of a default warrant alleging operating under the influence charge.

Shortly after noon on Sunday, Officer Richter arrested Mathew Frangiamone of Nassau Avenue, Wilmington on the basis of a default warrant issued by Carlisle police. He was bailed from Wilmington to appear in Concord Court.

Sunday evening a Revere man was arrested after a computer check revealed a license suspension. Carl Vega of Crest Avenue was charged with operating a motor vehicle after his license had been suspended.

Monday evening Officer Jim Peterson arrested a Billerica man on a non support warrant. Wayne Mountin of Friendship Lane was held overnight to appear in Woburn Court Tuesday morning.

Volpe resigns from fincom

Dennis J. Volpe of Reed Street has tendered his resignation from the Wilmington Finance Committee following seven years of service on that board.

In a letter sent to Fincom Chairman Anita Backman two weeks ago, Volpe said he felt compelled to step down because of job commitments which often prevent him from attending meetings.

Selectmen Monday night accepted the resignation with "sincere regrets."

Water treatment plant to be named for Eddie Sargent

This architect's rendering of the new Edmund Sargent Water Treatment Plant shows the settling ponds at left, and the building at right. It will be similar to the Butters Row water treatment plant, but will cost about twice as much. The treatment plant will be located at the present Barrows Pumping Station, near Hathaway Acres.

The new water treatment plant, to be constructed in North Wilmington, is to be named the Edmund H. Sargent water treatment plant. It will replace the present Barrows water plant, and is expected to be about $6.3 millions.

The Commisisoners of the Wilmington Water & Sewer Department, last Thursday approved the plans, prepared by Weston & Sampson, engineers from Wakefield. The plans had been prepared by engineer Alan Silbowicz and his assistant Bob Cook. Mr. Silbowicz was one of the designing engineers for the Butters Row plant, first in the nation designed to clear municipal water of carcinogic materials.

The building is to be on the site of the Barrows well field. The Water Department plans to retain the present structure. It is to be used as a storeroom.

Plans, and calls for bids are expected to be ready for the week of March 9.

If all goes as planned, the bids will be received in Room 12 of the Wilmington Town Hall, and bids will be opened in Room 9. Sub-contractor bids, according to the schedule, are to be opened April 10, and general contractor bids on April 24.

The bids will be studied in May, and awards decided sometime about May 15. The contracts are being scheduled for signing on May 21. Construction of the plant will start, it is planned, June 1.

There are no federal funds available to assist in paying for the construction of the treatment plant, which is expected to furnish about three million gallons of fresh water per day. There may be state funds available.

Commissioner Art Smith made a last minute check on the specifications to be certain that all pumps, etc., were to be of American manufacture. "Buy American" was Smith's slogan as he checked over the lists of machinery to be purchased.

Chairman George Allan told Silbowicz and Cook that the Wilmington Water Department would lay the water mains, approaching and departing from the Sargent water plant, and to the street. It would be done, he said "in our usual conservative manner," by which he meant that there would be no unnecessary uprooting of trees or other plants.

Sewer system explained to developers

Maybe they did not need to put their own test meters into the Pilcher Road sewer pumping station. That seemed to be the conviction of two representatives of the IMG (Investor's Management Group, Inc.) on February 19th when they left the meeting of the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners.

Randy T. Ely, a vice president and Lawrence P. Keats, an engineer, wanted to test the flow of the sewer from Ballardvale Street. Their point was that they seemed to believe there would be plenty of available sewage flow to accommodate the proposed housing development planned by the group, for land easterly of Arlene Avenue and westerly of Ballardvale Street.

Chairman George Allan, with Commissioner Arthur Smith, took nearly an hour to explain how the commissioners had developed the Wilmington sewers, and how builders and developers had contributed large to small sums in order to get sewer service in the area.

Sweeping his hand over a chart showing unsewered areas of West and North Wilmington, up to the Tewksbury line, Allan showed the places where hundreds of unsewered homes had no such service, and are yet paying for the development. "We are paying almost a million dollars a year more than we take in! Little by little we are evolving the sewer street system of Wilmington."

Smith told the two men that "We were on our way to develop a second set of sewers (for East Wilmington) but then we lost Federal Funds." Smith told the two men that in no way could the sewer cross the railroad tracks on Salem Street.

Smith told of turning down four or five proposals for hotels because of lack of capacity. "They will have to go down the Andover Street [eastern, ed] sewer."

"The sewer system was designed 20 years ago, when there was no 'comprehensive design'....and it deleted all marginal houselots."

"You are jumping to conclusions that you can jump in, any place." "We would end up sewering the whole town through one interceptor-- a hodge podge!"

Smith told the two men that the firms on Ballardvale Street had "paid $1 1/4 millions for the upper Ballardvale Street sewer" and had paid to enlarge the Pilcher Road pumping station.

"We still have a lot of lateral areas to serve - all the way to the Tewksbury line!"

"If a contractor wants to put in half a dozen homes - we make him sewer the entire street."

Keats observed that "this line has been designed to capacity for this watershed?" Smith answered, "Yes."

Finally, after half an hour Keats remarked that "A lot of people don't realize that Wilmington is a town which serves three watersheds - the Ipswich River, the Shawsheen River and the Aberjona River."

George Allan's answer was that (the engineering firm of) Fay Spofford "will give you everything. This is just an exercise in numbers."

Ely remarked that they were "looking for slack time in the sewer pumping schedule." Allan said "Where does it end? You want us to allow some areas, and then deprive the people off Salem Street?"

Keats remarked that he wanted a meter station "and manholes upstream." Smith told him of the insurance costs that would be charged. "Everything would be under the supervision of our people and our engineer. They would have to go over every project."

"Our engineer has it, and it is all public information. You are welcome to it!"

"Do it in a proper manner!" said Smith--"with our consulting engineer."

"If you find it is not satisfactory," said Allan "Send us a letter!" "Sit down and talk with Fay Spofford. They'll talk over your proposals!"

"However, if...you have an inspection, you'll have to pay our staff--who'll be there!"

Smith told them the department has records, drawings, plans, books. Ely: "That's good! A lot of towns do not!"

Allan warned that even if they do meter tests, that in no way allows them to join in. The two men departed, seemingly to get into contact with the Water & Sewer Department engineer.

Selectmen approve change of manager

Wilmington selectmen Monday night approved a change in managers at Shamrock Liquors. Following a background check by Police Chief Bobby Stewart, selectmen allowed the appointment of new store manager Bernard F. Cooney of Tewksbury. Cooney will replace Constantine Danos.

Under Mass. General Law the board, as licensing authority, has final approval over new managerial staff.

Eddie Sargent holds a model ship made by his uncle, Henry Wilson Sargent, who was known as "Henny Penny."

Sargent still spry at 86

Eddie Sargent, the man for whom the new water treatment plant is to be named, is confounded that it is being named for him.

He thought it might be named for someone who served as a commissioner for years. And he also offered the opinion that the Browns Crossing Pumping Station should be named for Caleb Harriman.

Sargent is in a good position to recall Harriman. It was Caleb Harriman who founded the Wilmington Water Dept. about 60 years ago.

Eddie Sargent served as superintendent from 1941 until his retirement in 1969. He is now 86 years old and in excellent health. In good weather, he still takes an occasional bicycle ride.

You'll still find him occasionally working, answering the phone at Wilmington Pump, a business bwned by his nephew, Norman Smith.

Eddie Sargent was born two months before the turn of the century in the house where Norman now lives. He now lives only a few hundred yards away, on Woburn Street.

His father, Charles J. Sargent was a selectman and overseer of the poor. His mother was a member of the Sheldon family.

If you want to talk about Wilmington in the early 1900's, there is nobody with a better memory than Eddie. He can tell you about Perry's Blacksmith Shop, which stood on the corner by Lucci's, on land now owned by Avco.

Or let him talk about Henny Penny. That was his uncle, Henry Wilson Sargent, a mechanical genius. Henny Penny ran a bicycle repair shop in the house where the Callan family now lives.

The Williamsburg Office Park, located just off Route 38 in Tewksbury beside Atamian Volkswagen, is now accepting client busineses. Most of the 36 units in the office condominium project have already been sold or leased, but some are still available.

Tewksbury office condominium

Williamsburg Office Park is a newly constructed (professionai) office condominium project located at 170 Main St., Route 38 and Route 495, in Tewksbury. The project is strategically located,approximately equal distance, between Routes 3 and 93, and it is next to Atamian Volkswagen and across from the Holiday Inn of Tewksbury.

This project consists of a land area of more than three acres. The newly constructed building is an aesthetic Williamsburg design property measuring approximately 37 feet wide by 272 feet long.

Since the building is constructed on an incline it is clearly visible from Routes 38 and 495, and since its completion it has become a new landmark structure in the area.

This (professional) office condo building has 12 self-contained individual office suites per floor for a total of 36 office condo units. Each unit contains two separate lavatories plus a utility room. Each office has window exposure to both north and south and the property boasts of wooden double hung windows that open on top and on bottom. Each individual office contains between 700 and 800 square feet. The property is framed with a brick faced center section.

All units contain individual forced warm air heat by gas and individual central air conditioning. All units are completed including wall to wall carpeting and dropped acoustical ceilings. The building is 100 percent sprinklered with the system being tied into the central fire station of the town. Plus, each unit has smoke detectors.

The building contains a large lighted parking lot accessible to both Main Street and Clark Road. The property has excellent exposure, and the suburban campus-type setting is ideal for professionals, sales reps, consultants, engineers, and financial services. The property is convenient to Lowell, Chelmsford, Andover, and Billerica, and it is also convenient to Greater Boston to the South, and Nashua, Pelham and Salem, New Hampshire to the north.

The developers of this property are Donald Van Greenby of Lowell and Peter DeGennaro of Wilmington. Financing was provided by the First Bank.

At this time, of the 36 units only 17 units, or 47 percent are available for sale and immediate occupancy.

Wildcats drive past Redmen

Wilmington High School's George Fuller drives past Tewksbury's Rich Prince for two points during Friday night's 55-49 Wildcat win at Tewksbury. The WHS win prevented the the Redmen from clinching a tournament berth.

Ready for tourney action

Tewksbury players Carl Melius (left) and Rich Prince battle Wildcats Jim Moynihan (3) and George Fuller (23) in some heated action under the boards Friday night. Watching the play is conference Most Valuable Player Mike Lombard (22). The Wildcats are on a roll as they begin Eastern Mass. Tournament play against Dom Savio tonight (Feb. 25). Game time is 7 p.m.

Real test for Wildcats

by Rick Cooke
Sports Editor

Wilmington High School's first-time MVC basketball champions will get a real test right off the bat in Eastern Mass Division II Tournament action when they travel to East Boston tonight (Feb. 25) to battle Dom Savio (17-3) in first round action. Game time is 7 p.m.

The Wildcats earned their first-ever title on their road to this tourney appearance with a 55-49 win at Tewksbury High School Friday night. Wilmington's victory denied the Redmen their first tournament appearance since the 1974-75 season.

"We're just looking forward to being in the states," noted Wilmington coach Dave Orndorff. "The kids are sky high and we're going to give it our best shot. Hey, we play Division One Schools all year, so we should be ready for Dom Savio."

What the 11-7 Wildcats can expect is a pressing, swarming defense that resembles Lowell's philosophy in the Merrimack Valley Conference.

The Wildcats have two big factors in their favor- they have not been blown out of a game all season (Lowell beat them, 60-48) and they have the conference' Most Valuable Player in 6'7" center Mike Lombard.

The junior Lombard has averaged 18 points and 14 rebounds per game this season and is surrounded by hard working role players in forwards Rob DeSantis and George Fuller, senior guard Jim Moynihan and junior Dan Woods, who has filled in superbly for an injured Eric Braciska over the last five games.

The Tewksbury game capped a red-hot stretch for the Cats as they qualified for the tournament for the third time in 30 years.

"We came out and hit our first eight shots in the first quarter to take a 16-0 lead," recalled Orndorff. "A big plus for us was Tom Moran giving Dan Woods a breather and Woods' foul shooting."

Woods sank seven of eight foul shots during the final three minutes when the Redmen were making a gallant run that saw them cut the Wilmington lead to only four points with 30 seconds left in the game.

Lombard was his usual superb self with 19 points and 11 rebounds, getting help from Fuller (12 points, six rebounds), DeSantis (eight points, six steals) and Woods (eight points).

The Tewksbury offense finally got untracked thanks to a fourth quarter press. Leading the way for the Redmen (11-9 overall) were Tim Boudreau and Rich Prince with 13 points apiece. Center Carl Melius was next with 11 points.

Local stars shine

Several local basketball standouts played prominent roles in the annual MVC All-Star games played Sunday afternoon at the Lawrence H. Cushing Sr. Memorial Gymnasium.

The West topped the East, 84-71 in the boys' contest as Wilmington center Mike Lombard canned 12 points for the winners.

Redmen Tim Boudreau hooped nine points, while Rich Prince managed four. Tewksbury guard Kevin O'Brien also participated in the game.

The Small School girls edged the Large School, 76-73, as Wilmington's Karen Andersen hooped six points for the winners.

Tewksbury players Tricia Censullo (five points) and Jeanne Sullivan (four points) also contributed for the winning squad.

All eyes

The TMHS defense is all eyes as the Wildcats attempt to score in MVC girls' basketball action Thursday night.

Moran scores goal

Lake Forest split a pair of non-conference games against Division I Wisconsin's reserves last weekend, Feb. 13-14, losing 8-2 and winning 4-2.

Friday night a lackluster Forester squad came to the rink. "We were not emotionally in the game. We were not ready to play and it showed in the final outcome," senior Louie Hondros commented.

Wisconsin, which brought its' third, fourth, and fifth lines, jumped out to an early lead and coasted to the six goal win, 8-2. Freshman Dave Szazynski scored both Forester goals in a stellar performance.

The Foresters jumped out to a lead Saturday and never relinquished it. Marty Wittmer gave Lake Forest a 1-0 lead in the second period. Wisconsin then tied the game 1-1.

Successive goals by Denny Moran (89, Wilmington, Mass.), Steve Steen and Andy Richards upped the lead to 4-1. The Badgers added a late goal to provide the final margin, 4-2.

Steen, finally breaking into the scoring machine mold that the Forester fans have been waiting for, had three goals in the last four games.

Lake Forest now stands at 11-8-1 on the year with the largest series of the season coming up Friday and Saturday against Notre Dame. The winner of this pair will win the conference for the regular season.

Outdoors column

by Bill Conlon

The third annual S.W.E.A.T. ice fishing derby went off as planned last Sunday morning, with anglers and weather teaming up to produce a fine morning on Ames Pond, Tewksbury.

The tournament, sponsored by the Shawsheen Watershed Environmental Action Team, saw 111 anglers signing up, with many of the fisherfolk on the ice well before dawn.

When compared to the previous weekend, the weather was almost spring-like. Temperatures stayed moderate throughout the day and the wind was just a breeze. The Tewksbury Youth Center held a tournament on Ames the weekend before, however, with sub-zero temperatures and a biting wind all day. Some days on the ice are just better than others ...

The same can be said for the fishing as well. Some days fishing are just better than others, and Sunday saw some nice fish taken from Ames.

Cash prizes were offered for the top five biggest fish caught, with a five-ounce bonus added for all fish returned to the pond alive.

First place and $250 went to Jim DeCarolis of Tewksbury for a chain pickerel weighing 4-pounds-8-ounces. Second and $100 went to Bruce Kauppila of Lowell for a 3-pound-15 bass; while Dave Aruda of Chelmsford took home $50 for a 3-pound-11 bass which took third.

In the "Some People Have All The Luck" category, Bruce Kauppila reappeared in fourth place, and took an additional $50, for a largemouth weighing 3-pounds-9. Ken Cassel of Chelmsford rounded out the cash field with a $50 bass weighing one-pound-11 which took fifth place.

Veteran Ames Pond angler Gordon Lutz, who won the S.W.E.A.T. derby two years ago and organized last week's Youth Center contest, managed to catch a last-minute bass to take home the tenth-and-last prize of a set of ice creepers and a T-shirt. The officers of S.W.E.A.T. praised Gordie for his help in getting the derby off to a smooth start.

Just for the record, your author spent the day fishing beside Gordie, but -- sadly -- to no avail. Sunday made the third consecutive outing I've had without a single, solitary flag, let alone any fish. Even the presence of one of the best ice fishermen in the region couldn't help. None of his luck rubbed off.

And while it might be convenient to dump the blame somewhere else, say by claiming a fishing buddy is hexed or that the bait bucket is cursed, it just doesn't wash. I'm to blame for my own lousy luck (sniff) and I'll just have to accept it.

Sigh.

--Tackle Box--

There is still ice left, even though the season is winding down, and naturally there are tournaments left to join. Two tournaments are on the slate for this weekend, and these will probably finish up the ice fishing season for '87.

Lake Attitash in Merrimac, Mass., will the scene of yet another tournament, after seeing no fewer than five contests this winter. Merrimac Bait & Tackle, which has already hosted two derbies on Attitash this season, is offering one more contest to the frostbitten fellowship. Top prize in this coming Sunday's derby will be $1,000 cash, out of a total prize pool of $2,400. Fishing starts at 7 a.m., with a $10 entry fee.

Another tournament is set for Saturday, Feb. 28, on Fort Pond in Lunenburg, located just off Route 2. Dave's Bait is sponsoring the first-ever event. (It should be noted that Fort Pond is heavily stocked with trout. Plan ahead.)

Some of the names now under consideration for this column are "Northeastern Outdoors" and "New England Outdoors." Anyone with a better suggestion, please send it along.

To back up a popular rumor now making the rounds, Silver Lake in Wilmington was indeed stocked with Northern Pike. A fish census showed Silver Lake had an overabundance of sunfish, and a few hundred young pike were tossed in last year both to keep the kibbies in line and to offer some potential trophy fishing to local anglers in the future.

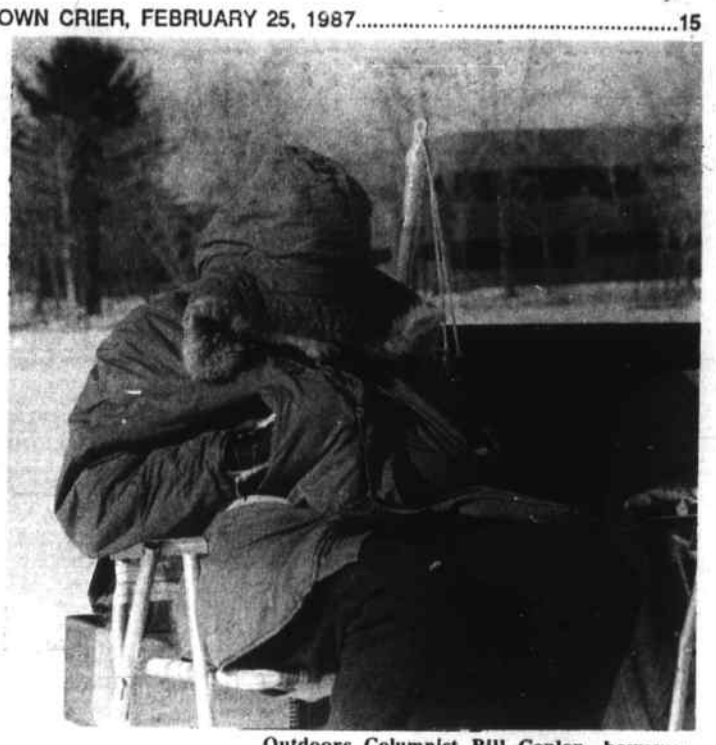

Bob Madore, aquatic biologist with the Division of Fisheries & Wildlife, said the lake was stocked with a few hundred sub-adult fish, each about 10 inches long, in May of '86. The pike will not reach the legal limit of 28 inches for some time, he said, but they are indeed there.

So if you see a monstrous shadow cruise by while swimming in Silver Lake, be advised. The pike are there, and growing.

Watch and learn

Slow day

Outdoors Columnist Bill Conlon, however, had such a slow day of fishing in the Ames Pond tournament that he fell asleep in his lawn chair. One of the other ice fishermen heard Bill snoring and snapped off a quick picture of the snoozing angler.

Benefit hockey game Sunday

A hockey game between the Boston Bruins old-timers and the Mass. State Legislators hockey team will take place on Sunday, Mar. 1 at noon at the Ristuccia Exposition Center in Wilmington.

Led by all-time Bruins high scorer Johnny Bucyk, the Bruins will face a team which includes Sen. Bob Buell, former senator Ron MacKenzie and Wilmington resident Carl Backman.

Tickets are available for a minimum donation of $5 at Wilmington Ford or at the Ristuccia Exposition Center. Proceeds from the game will go to the Ristuccia Foundation, a non-profit organization that provides counselling for cancer patients and their families.

Wilmington school news

by Arlene Surprenant

Gifted Program

Students from the Wilmington schools gifted program will visit the Concord Museum for a program on colonial music on March 4 and 11.

The fourth, fifth, and sixth graders will view a brief slide presentation on the musical developments between Colonial America and Europe. There will be demonstrations on various instruments followed by singing games and circle dances. All students will be given a chance to try the instruments, which include the bass and the harpsichord.

Woburn Street School

All parents are welcome to attend the next school PAC meeting on Thursday, Feb. 26 at 9:30 a.m. in the cafeteria. Mrs. Brenda Squire, Director of Reading and Language Arts, will be the guest speaker.

Please reserve Tuesday evening, March 3. Dr. Sandra Fox will present a "Good Grief" program to explain how children can handle their grief when someone close dies. Dr. Fox will share some valuable advice and insight into this very sensitive area.

Wildwood School

The students and staff of the Wildwood School said a fond farewell to art teacher Dorothy Nylin on Friday, Feb. 6. At a morning assembly Principal Robert Barrett expressed appreciation for Ms. Nylin's 25 years of service to the Wilmington School System, each class performed a special song for her, and the Wildwood PAC presented her with a gift certificate to the Appleton Inn in Woburn. While 13 members of the PAC monitored the classrooms, the Wildwood staff members enjoyed a farewell luncheon in the school cafeteria.

The next regular edition of the school newspaper, the "Wildwood Spirit" will be published this week. Conceived by the PAC as an efficient means of communication between parents and teachers, the newspaper has been published regularly since September under the editorship of Mrs. Peggy Kane. Reading "The Spirit" is one way for parents to keep aware of coming events at the school. Teachers find it a valuable source of information also.

March will be a busy month for activities at the school. On Monday, March 2, the Museum of Science will bring a travelling animal show here for grades K-2. The show, geared especially to younger students, will begin at 9:30 a.m. On Friday, March 13, grades 3-6 will be treated to a show with larger than life puppets called "Memories of a Chinese Grandmother." This educational show delves into Chinese culture and heritage and involves complex puppetry and costuming. Students will participate in the perfomance which begins at 10:30 a.m.

During the week of March 16 the Wildwood School will participate in the "Weekly Reader" Balloon Launch. Elementary schools throughout the United States will be launching balloons that week to see who's balloon will travel the farthest. The school with the winning entry will be awarded $500 from "Weekly Reader." The Wildwood PAC will supply the helium for the more than 300 balloons to be launched that day.

Wilmington High School

When Leann calls...or Sheila, Karen or AnnMarie, on March 1 from 12 noon to 8 p.m., please give your hearts and listen, as they are working on the Wilmington Phone-a-Thon for the American Heart Association. This year, in lieu of the traditional door-to-door campaign, volunteers from the National Honor Society have graciously donated their time to request donations from their neighbors by phone.

Beth Golemo, Phone-a-Thon Coordinator, urges everyone in Wilmington to be generous this year. "The Heart Association is winning its fight against our #1 killer," says Beth, "but we cannot continue without the support of many people."

Compugraphic has agreed to host the Wilmington Phone-a-Thon this year.

Adventures in music

Eight elementary band students from Wilmington have been selected to play with the AIM (Adventures in Music) professional orchestra in concert on Sunday, March 8. The concert will be held at 2 p.m. at Reading High School Auditorium.

Those young musicians are Mathew LaCava, Kerri Lyman,Leah Mazzoni, Jennifer MacDonald, and Mark O'Brien from the Wildwood School; Jenna Solari and Dana Valatka from the Shawsheen School; and Cheri Lawrence from the Woburn Street School.

Student instrumentalists are chosen from several towns to perform with the orchestra. AIM is a regional organization from Concord and is responsible for the exciting concert series.

The program for the March 8 concert will include the "Sorcerers' Apprentice" and "Danse Macabre." Tickets sell for $5.00 and are available at the door or by mail. Send checks payable to Adventures in Music in care of David Blanchard, 26 Center Ave., Reading, Ma. 01867. Call Jeff Horney 965-6293 or No. Int. 657-7111 for further information.

Author's Note: Please turn in any information for this column by Monday afternoon or call Arlene Surprenant at 658-5696 by Monday evenings.

Four uncontested races in Tewksbury election

Final nomination papers have been filed with the Tewksbury Town Clerk's office for the annual town elections. Four of the offices are being sought by unchallenged candidates, while three other races will see some competition.

Charles E. Coldwell will seek unchallenged reelection to the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen; Liz Carey is looking for three more years as the Town Clerk; and William Hurton will run unopposed for a return as Town Moderator.

The only unchallenged position being sought by a non-incumbent is William Lindsey seeking a seat on the Board of Health. Joan Dunlevy apparently does not seek reelection to her health board post.

A single position on the Planning Board is being sought by two candidates seeking the five-year post. Incumbent Joseph G. Doherty will be challenged in the race by Paul J. McAskill, Jr.

One position on the School Committee is being pursued by two candidates, both non-incumbents. Donna M. Giordano-Colella will face Patricia M.W. Meuse for the three-year position.

Three candidates will seek election to two positions open on the Board of Library Trustees. The three-year seats will be sought by incumbent Robert F. Kerber, Eleanor G. Corey, and Robert W. Moore.

The election of town officers will be held on April 4, with polls open from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. The naming of the new town officers will be conducted as Article One on the warrant of the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held May 4.

Emily Turner engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dean Turner of Watertown have announced the engagement of their daughter, Emily, to Michael Anthony DeLuca of Burlington.

Miss Turner attended the Watertown Public Schools and is a 1980 graduate of Yale University. She is employed as a personnel administrator at Badger Engineers, Inc. in Cambridge, and lives in Watertown.

Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dominic DeLuca of Tewksbury, formerly of Watertown. He attended Watertown and Tewksbury elementary schools, Shawsheen Valley Regional Vocational Technical High School in Billerica, and is a 1984 graduate of the University of Lowell. He is employed as an electrical engineer at Digital Strategies, Inc. in Burlington.

A September wedding is planned.

Selectmen call for investigation into delay

Selectmen chairman Rocco DePasquale this week called for "a proper investigation" to look into a delay in ambulance response time the night Mitchell Spiris died of a heart attack.

The action was prompted by a letter from Spiris' daughter Suzi Cushing, who claimed the 13 minutes which elapsed between the time a call was placed in the fire department and the time of arrival of an ambulance was "unacceptable."

"We need to know why no one was there any sooner," stated Cushing, adding that there were "a great many unanswered questions."

DePasquale said his board would review any findings resulting from the investigation in an executive session.

Lynnfield 'A Heritage Preserved'

By JIM ROUILLARD

LYNNFIELD — Her story involves sore feet, mouths as black as the back of the chimney, and foul fluid and treachery from a dainty white rabbit.

Deep in the wilderness, the first recorded European travelers to what is now Lynnfield heard "terrible roarings" which they thought might come from bears, unicorns, wild asses or devils set to devour God's people.

The men saw reptiles and serpents, including two which made a "strange whirring noise" like that of the night watch in London.

But they felt nonetheless "in a paradise" of "moving things" that were good to eat.

They were, according to Lynnfield's Marcia Wiswall, probably the first white men to walk the ground around the area which later came to include Dead Man's Curve and Doughnut Pond. An account of their travels in the summer of 1630 is provided by the journal of one of their number, Obadiah Turner.

The small group, Wiswall writes in "Lynnfield, A Heritage Preserved," (1976) had set out from the village of Saugus (now Lynn) to determine the feasibility of a settlement to the north and west of the earlier settlement. They made their journey, apparently of about four days, according to Turner's narrative, to discover what the "land and productions of this our heritage might be."

And despite the hardships of wilderness hiking, the men liked most of what they found:

"We saw valies of mighty trees of such kind as Old England is a stranger to. And wee made sore our feet by the climbing of hills among rocks and thornie brambles and vines. Great store of wild berries were on every hand. Among them were many black shining berries as big as ye pills of ye apothecaries ... Wee did pluck some and found them savory to eat in fire cakes and did think them apt for puddings.

"Then there were found other large shining berries growing on creeping vines of most lucious taste, and we did eat all till our mouths were black as ye chimney back."

As they journeyed, Turner noted, they sometimes saw "skulking about" among the trees "what we conjectured to be Indjans or Devils!"

In either case, Turner evidently felt secure, for though the "great foe of all God his people hath already begun to harrass and plague this godlie

All aboard! Exploring a toy train empire

For 25 years, Adolf Arnold has been a relentless collector

PETER MAIN — STAFF

Collector and curator Arnold by the 'master layout' at his toy train village and museum in Middleboro, Mass.

By Keith Henderson
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Middleboro, Mass.

"Good afternoon, welcome aboard," booms Adolf Arnold, owner, conductor, and engineer of the A&D Toy Train Village and Railway Museum.

The two women he's greeted look faintly bemused, as their children scurry from one display to another bellowing, "Look Mommie – elves, Santa, trains!"

Dozens, hundreds of trains.

An 1860s smoke belcher circles a Western town; a diesel pulls a long string of tank cars past a refinery; an intricately detailed steam locomotive guides its passenger coaches through a Bavarian village. Most of the trains chug into action at the push of a button by an entranced child, or adult.

Christmas themes are here and there, but the festive air comes primarily from the whirring and clacking of the tiny engines themselves – tapping out the enduring allure of railroading and the ever-popular toys it spawned.

Acquiring miniature trains has been Mr. Arnold's preoccupation for the past quarter century. And not just electric trains. "There's no end to it – trains made out of wax, sugar, chocolate, paper, you name it."

He even has a colorful "spit-ball" train crafted on a sheet of construction paperyears ago by his son Douglas (the "D" in "A&D"). Over 2,000 trains in all, from 21 countries.

"Whatever looks like a train, is a train, runs, stands still, is pretty – I take it!" proclaims Arnold with a guffaw. He doesn't care much about authenticity and prototype operation – obsessions with "serious" model railroaders. With rare exceptions, his exhibits all came "out of a box" at some point. They were sold off a toy store shelf – from the vintage 1850 tin wind-up locomotive to the shiniest new Lionel.

A portly, grandfatherly man whose robust voice carries the inflection of his native Germany, Arnold began collecting as a respite from the pressures of his advertising business. But the hobby soon outstripped his home.

He recalls the point at which his wife, Virginia – a patient, understanding woman who for the most part has supported his toy train empire – rebelled. "The living room was full, the bedrooms, the dining room, and my wife said, 'No, no more!' "

So the search began for some kind of building to contain the flood of rolling stock and locomotives.

After a number of real estate deals fell through, Arnold happened on the Middleboro site – an abandoned supermarket in this rural, somewhat nondescript corner of southern Massachusetts. Three months and a big chunk of capital later, the outside of the old market had been tranformed. But the inside, says Arnold, "was a big mess, with boxes everywhere."

About then, he continues, eyes twinkling, "the miracle happened." He and a friend had taken the first, faltering steps towards turning the barnlike structure into a museum that would reflect its founder's passion for toy

Trivia

Marriage among the Miao people of China is less a physical union than a social one, says National Geographic. On the marriage day the couple may not even converse publicly, let alone cohabit.

Ant colonies are female societies, in which the sole job of drones, or males, is to mate for a few moments with a young queen, then die, says National Geographic.

United Way has ambitious goals

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay has released an unprecedented five-year strategic plan to meet critical human needs in eastern Massachusetts. Citing rising local needs and declining federal resources, the United Way announced plans to double its fundraising and increase allocations to agencies providing vital services as part of a commitment to build a stronger community in 1992.

According to newly elected United Way Chairman John Larkin Thompson, president of Blue Shield of Massachusetts, the 1987-92 plan marks a bold new initiative for the United Way and is a unique effort by a local human service organization to respond to community needs. Thompson presented the plan at the United Way's annual meeting, which also launched the centennial year of United Ways in America.

Drawing on a community-wide assessment of local needs, demographics, the economy, and human services over the next five years, the plan features five goals:

To increase volunteer participation of all segments of the community in United Way, so that it better reflects the diverse community it serves. To increase the depth of knowledge, commitment, and ownership of the United Way by all volunteers, and especially by volunteer leaders.

To play a leadership role, in collaboration with others, in identifying community priorities and in addressing community needs. To become a key partner in community problem-solving.

To focus at least $1 million each year on one particularly critical community need, and demonstrate dramatic, concrete results. To increase the number of urban and suburban agencies supported by the United Way to provide priority services to the community not adequately provided by others. To give special attention to the capacity of smaller, grass-roots agencies and those managed by minorities and women.

To present the United Way effectively so that corporate and individual donors view the United Way as their personal and best vehicle for giving to human services.

To double the United Way's financial resources to meet the community's growing needs. To raise $80 million by 1992.

The plan predicts that in the next five years, human needs will increase dramatically, human service programs will be more expensive to operate, and resources to meet critical needs will decline. The plan is designed to enable the United Way to effectively respond to projections that:

Poverty will increase, and more and more of the poor will be women and children.

The continued high cost of living — and housing — will create severe hardships.

Minorities will continue to do poorly in the regional economy and increase in numbers.

The number of older elderly — those more than 75 years of age — will rise significantly.

Social problems — such as homelessness, drug and alcohol abuse, and domestic violence — will continue to be prevalent.

As examples of new strategic directions, the United Way recently made major one-time grants focusing on specific community needs. Since the fall of 1985, the organization has earmarked $1.8 million to support neighborhood-based housing organizations — agencies that develop and manage low-income rental units — and $700,000 to fund programs dealing with teen problems, such as teen pregnancy and substance abuse.

"This plan is our commitment to our community to be more open, more responsive, and more caring in the next five years than we are today," Thompson told 400 volunteers at the annual meeting. "Most of us have benefited form the local economic success story, but too many people are falling farther and farther behind.

"It is time for us to rededicate ourselves to building a stronger and more caring community."

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

I received a call from a lady from Stoneham who was upset because of unsatisfactory work performed on her house by an unscrupulous contractor. She didn't want to give me her name but, because other readers may feel the same way, I'm going to tell you what she said. "I love to read your column in the supplement of the Independent, but why do you imply week after week that everyone is wonderful, beautiful and honest. Almost everyone knows (except you) that there are many people out there ready to entrap, cheat and fleece the public. Many are just waiting to steal anything they can get away with and using special gloves — even a "hot" stove. There are some who are even worse, who by their incidious gossip malign a person's good name and reputation that has taken a lifetime to build. Woodchipper, why don't you write about what life really is, that 'the law of the jungle' prevails — mean, greedy and hungry."

I forgive her for hanging up on me, but I must answer truthfully. "My dear lady, I hope you don't believe that a flower garden contains nothing but weeds, thorns and burrs. It is my contention that this country, America, is a great big beautiful flower garden (people), who are ready and eager to help anyone in need. We have millions of volunteers who devote countless hours of their time and energies for the betterment of mankind. They are visible everywhere, in area hospitals as Candy Strippers, men and women involved with the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, companions to the sick and lonely senior citizens, etc. Perhaps even more importantly, wonderful parents who are concerned about their children, bringing them up to show respect for family, flag and country. Please lady, don't condemn the whole world because of a bad contractor or a few sinners."

Folks, I'm sorry for this long explanation, but Woodchips is dedicated to the beautiful flowers in the Middlesex East area. Please remember before signing any contract, the large readable words give you something and the small eye-straining ones take something away from you.

Uncle John Shea of North Reading was asked the secret of his bouyant good health. "I eat two cloves of garlic every day, that's my secret! " Standing 10 feet away from him, his pal Rowan Fitzgerald shouted, (as he held a handkerchief to his nose) "Who the heck says it's a secret? " Folks, please think of this for a moment, it doesn't help much to forgive if you plan on telling everyone you see that you forgave.

Billy (Barker) McCall is a fan of this column. He introduced me to two building material executives, John Dennison Jr. and Brian Scott. Their specialty is lumber so I asked them if they knew "Theresa Green in Woburn? " Brian came right back with "Of course we know 'Trees are Green.' We also know that the mighty oak was once a nut like you! " Many have walked the plank for saying less than that to me.

"Dan Hogan," Bill McCall said, "is a 'Ladder Day Saint' with the Woburn Fire Department. I told Dan, the Dalmation borrowed to find the hydrants last winter was returned to me 'spotless.' While in the area, I thought I'd stop in and see my cousin Diane Cook in North Woburn. I asked her little boy, Dennis, who was playing in the snow, "Are your parents home? " "They was in but now they is gone out." "They was in but is gone out? " "Good grief, Dennis, where's your grammar? " "Oh she's in the kitchen baking an apple pie."

MDC officer Paul Pierce's mother, Eileen, of Woburn was retired from the Registry of Motor Vehicles, but was called back because of her experience to help out in the Commercial Department at the Woburn office. I hope to attend Paul's wedding to the beautiful Judy Foye of Revere. Paul stopped a car for speeding and when he noticed the driver was a priest, asked, "Father, where's the Beano game? "

Woodchips welcomes William McCabe of Charlestown as the new State Commissioner of Public Safety. I mention this for many reasons, first I worked in the Navy Yard in Charlestown 19 years, I wrote for Gloria Conway, editor of the Charlestown Patriot and, thirdly, I was voted an honorary member of "The Townies." The most important reason is that I know the state police to be the greatest police force in Massachusetts. These are some I know, Capt. Edward Cronin of Reading, Commanding Officer at Logan Airport, Sgt. Jim Sartori of Saugus, Public Relations Officer at Headquarters, Trooper Joe Howley, Jim's assistant, Anthony Grillo, Deputy Superintendent and Charlie Sweeney, retired state trooper and my next door neighbor.

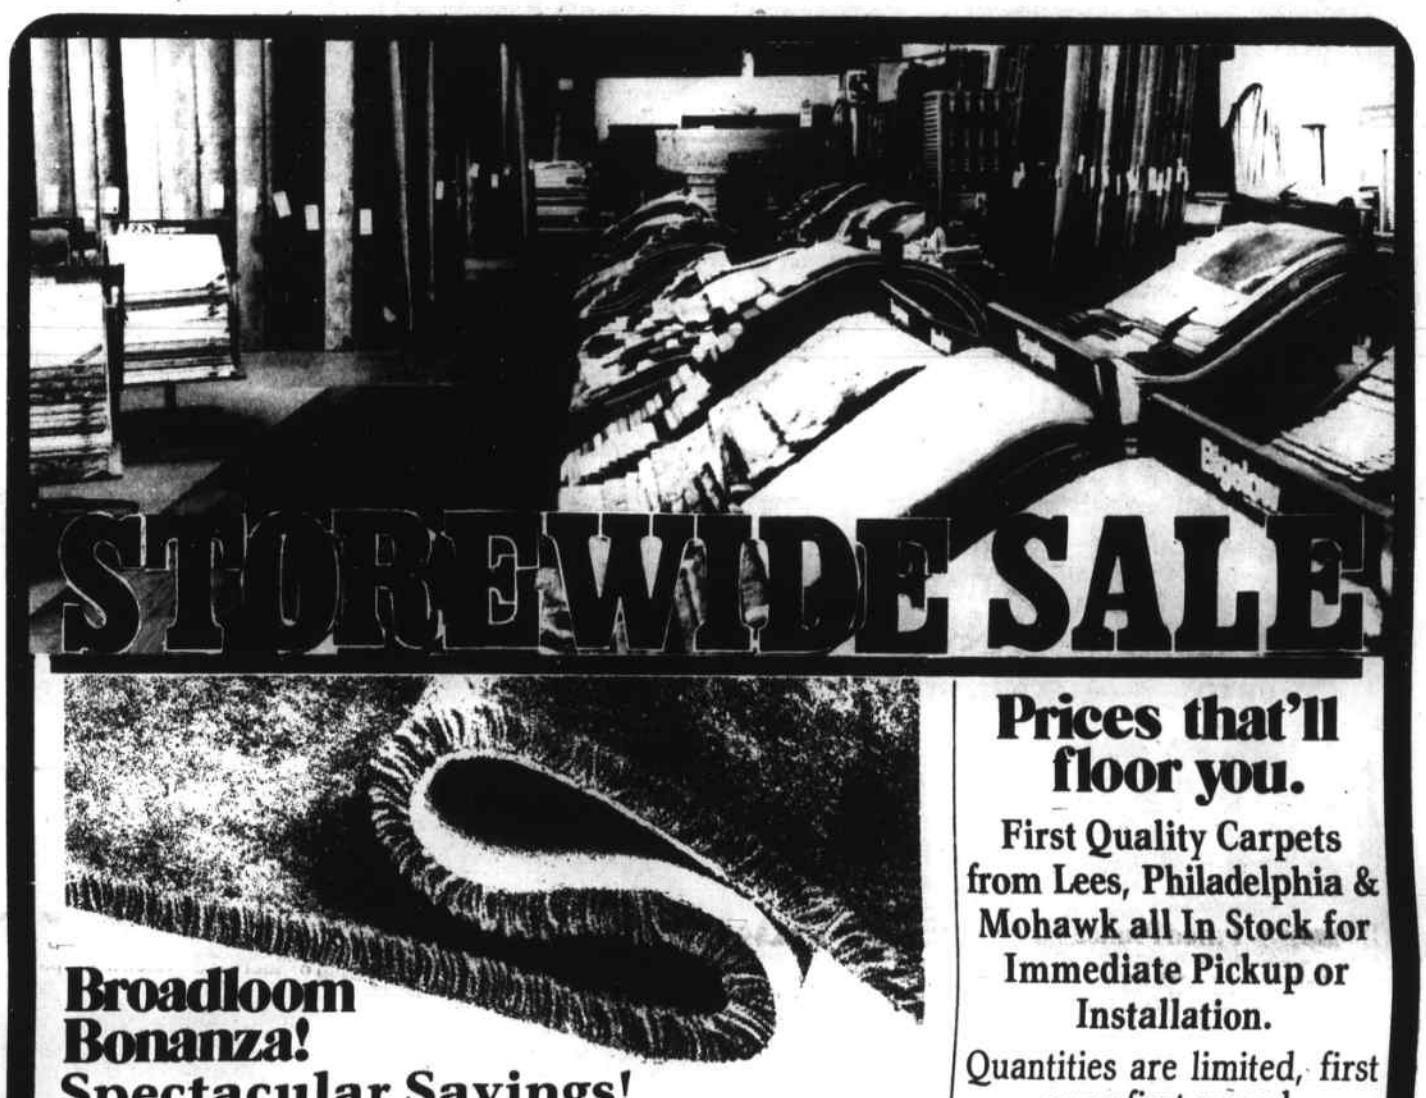

If you have one more for the road, you can be sure that you'll also have a state trooper for a "chaser." First class men should not waste time on second class disagreements. The state police raided a bookie parlor and those arrested gave these excuses for being there: a locksmith said he was trying to make a "bolt" for the door when the police came; an electrician said he was changing a "fuse." The judge gave him a "light" sentence — five days in a "dry cell." A plumber said he was working on a blocked drain when a trooper "flushed" him out.

Newly installed as officers of North Reading Rainbow Assembly No. 103 were Christen Anderson, "Faith;" Christina Sadlow, "Charity:" Heidi company," he and his fellow settlers looked to big ordinance (cannon) to take care of the Indians and "godlie bookes and catechisms to fortify against the other."

Aside from berries, the first recorded white travelers to the Lynnfield region also delighted in the obvious abundance of fowl, fish and game in the woods and ponds, "most savory to ye appetite and healthy for ye stomach."

Yet the conclusion of Turner's journey was not quite so appetizing:

"It was somewhat within the night when we came in sight of home. In coming over the hillock nigh the doore of our habitation I discried a daintie white rabbit as it seemed, which I deemed would make a savory dish for breakfast on the morrow.

"Giving chase I was soon almost upon him, when lo he whisked up a bushy tail over his hinder parts and then threw it towards me with a mighty rush! and it shed upon me a liquor of such stinke that nothing but the opening of the bottomless pit can equal.

"My eyes and my breath seemed stopped forever. When I recovered the smell remained upon me insomuch that they would fain drive me from the house saying they could not abide within while I remained. And I still carry it about with me in a yet terrible degree. I am parsuaded this is another device of Satan, that four-footed beast being an impe let to do the Devil his baptism by sprinkling."

If any reader suspects the Turner narrative to be apocryphal or embellished by a later scholar, writer Karl F. Koopland notes that the three recognized genera of skunk on earth are all limited to the New World – and that among the local species the amount of white on the fur is "exceedingly variable."

Yet despite the 17th-century Englishmen's confusion of an Essex County mammal with an "impe" and "device of Satan," "Certain it is," Wiswall writes, "that they found the land habitable, petitioned the General Court for a land grant, and within a few years began a settlement" in Lynnfield.

The settlement started with "dugout" homes, according to earlier Lynnfield historian Thomas Wellman.

"It is almost impossible," Wiswall continues, "for us to imagine the lives of these early settlers. They had left England, their homes, churches, and families, to be crowded into a small ship with children, animals and household possessions for a voyage of about 46 days.

"After settling originally in Saugus, the families set out for still another new home, this time on foot for the most part, or perhaps with one horse, carrying their possessions and the smallest children ... It would have taken them most of a day to get here and set up some sort of temporary shelter ...

"The first shelters were rooms dug into the side of hills or underground ... These were warm and provided protection from the weather until trees could be felled and log cabins built ... Life was not easy; it was a time of constant anxiety and struggle for survival. In spite of that, new families came and were accepted each year, and the original settlers made grants of land to them. Thus a town was 'planted'."

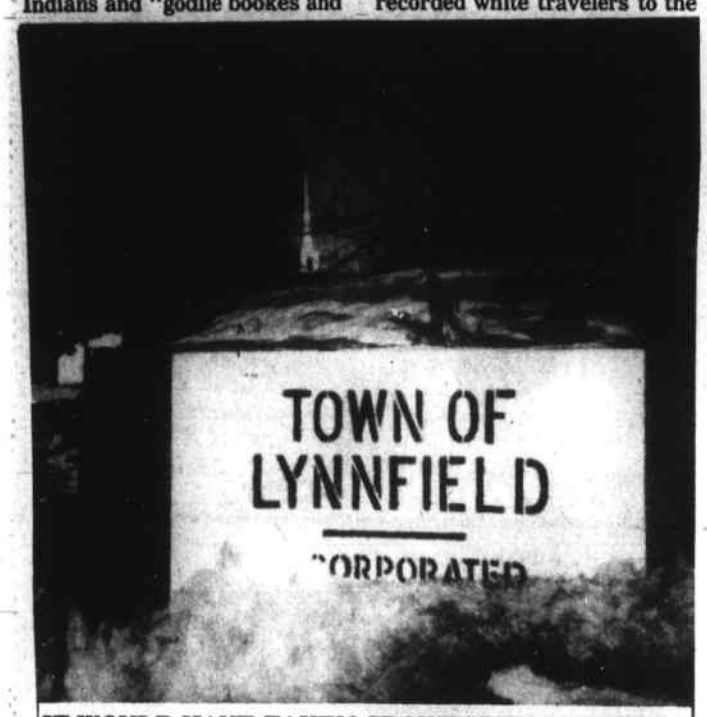

The planting of the white man's town, of course, meant displacement of the original settlers. Wiswall notes that aboriginal artifacts found in Lynnfield, as elsewhere throughout New England, indicate "inhabitance by Indians perhaps for as long as three thousand years.

"An Indian millstone for grinding grain was discovered in the excavation of an Indian camp site beyond the Sagamore Golf Club near the Middleton line, and at the edge of Reedy Meadow, east of Main Street, the site of an Indian camp was found on what is known as Partridge Island.

"Triangular war arrows, pestles, axe heads and other implements from several Indian camps have also been discovered. Even today one occasionally turns up in a backyard."

Despite a possible 3000 years of Indian settlement, by 1637 the roots of Lynnfield were well planted, the first land grants drawn, and the white man settled in to stay, perhaps for the next 3000 years.

Next: The plantation Grows.

IT WOULD HAVE TAKEN CROWBAR, pick and chisel (a windshield scraper didn't work) to chip February ice from stone on town common announcing Lynnfield's incorporation. Spire of town's Centre Congregational Church may be seen in background. Incorporation as town, by the way, occurred in 1814.

railroading. It was "a very hot evening, and we were sweating, putting up walls," Arnold remembers.

Suddenly, people started dropping in. One was a carpenter, another a electrician. All were friends or friends of friends. All had heard about the project and wanted to lend a hand. Some were model train enthusiasts; many weren't.

"The volunteers made it all possible," says Arnold, a note of emotion in his voice. He figures some 4,300 hours were donated. "And now here's something that many people are proud of," he adds, sweeping his arm to encompass the attractive display cases, the 34-foot-long master layout, abuzz with a dozen trains running at once, and the trolleys and locos clicking along on overhead rails.

Arnold estimates he's had 50,000 visitors during the two years the museum has been open. Some have come from such far-off places as Spain, Saudi Arabia, and Germany. Today, a young couple from London, the Riches, are visiting, having seen a listing in the Boston Globe. Their blond little boy, William, peers intently at a freight train rounding a bend inches from his nose. "We knew he would like it, and the adults would too," says his mother, with a smile.

That kind of response, says Arnold, is all the reward he needs.

LYNNFIELD'S FIRST CHURCH (meeting house) built in 1714 as Lynn's second church and only place of worship and government in town for more than 115 years. By 1832, historians report, 12 church members could not accept new Unitarian theology and built own structure across street. Before long, Unitarian Society had joined new congregation.

ANIMAL TRACKING

Outdoor Vacations For Women Over 40 has arranged a day of animal tracking on March 15 in Groton, MA. with Paul Rezendes, one of the most knowledgeable trackers in New England. After a 2-hour slide presentation, the afternoon will be spent hiking and examining clues left by local animals. Registration in advance is a must. For more information please call Marion Stoddart at 448-3331 or write P.O. Box 200, Groton, MA. 01450.

DIVORCE COURT PROCEDURES

A prominent divorce lawyer, Philip D. Woodbury, will describe court procedures and resources in a lecture-discussion entitled "Dealing Successfully with the Divorce Court and Legal Issues". Sponsored by Riverside Family Institute, a non-profit organization, the presentation will be given at the office of Riverside Family Institute, 259 Walnut Street, Room 14, Newtonville, on Monday evening, March 16, at 8 P.M. No pre-registration is required. For more information, please call 964-6833.

INTER-CULTURAL

Interested in tutoring and befriending an international newcomer in your own community? We will train, coach and support you in your intercultural relationship. Next workshop is March 6, 7, 8. For more information, call One with One at 254-1691.

TOURS TO ITALY & IRELAND

Tours to Italy and Ireland will be coordinated by Middlesex Community College faculty members this summer. Participants are welcome to join the tour on a credit or non-credit basis. Scheduled for the end of June, the ten-day tour of Italy including Milano, Venezia, Firenze, Rome, and surroundings is guided by an instructor who has lived and studied in Italy. Tour members may make arrangements to receive academic credit. For further information, write or phone the Division of Continuing Education office at Box T, Bedford, MA. 01730 (phone 275-8910, ext. 240).

NONTRADITIONAL CAREERS

The Women's Technical Institute is offering a workshop for women interested in nontraditional careers on Saturday, Feb. 28, March 7, 14 and 21 from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Explore your career options in technology and the trades. Group discussion, slideshow, and a tour of the Career Resource Center and the Training Labs. Call 266-2243 to register. No charge.

FUTURESHAPE SALON

The newest and easiest approach to a gentle and mild form of exercise is Futureshape. Sister-in-laws Suzanne and Marian DeStefano have recently opened in Burlington, 265 Winn Street, an unusual and unique toning and firming salon for both men and women.

Six motorized tables work with you, to help tone and firm every part of your body. A free session is offered to all newcomers.

For further information call Futureshape of Burlington at 229-0110.

AMERICANA

Fine Americans and antiques from all over the world will be featured at the 16th edition of the Sheraton Rolling Green Antique exhibit and sale to be presented by Olde Mystic Antique Shows Inc., Sunday, March 1 at the Sheraton Rolling Green in Andover.

The show will feature more than 70 specially selected top quality antique dealers from all over New England and the northeast, plus a special appearance by Museum Services of Farmington, Conn., restorers and conservators of fine art and antiques.

ST. AUGUSTINE SCHOLAR

One of the world's foremost scholars in the writings of St. Augustine will be a guest lecturer at Merrimack College on Tuesday, March 3.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Chadwick, dean of Christ Church at Oxford University and Regius Professor Emeritus of Divinity at Cambridge, will speak on "Augustine Today" in his March 3 presentation, scheduled to begin at 2:30 P.M. in the chapel of Austin Hall, the Merrimack administration building. The Anglican minister and scholar will discuss the impact of St. Augustine's teachings and writings on contemporary society.

The public is invited to Doctor Chadwick's lecture. Further information is available from the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs at Merrimack (683-7111, ext. 114).

8 TO 15

ACADEMY INTRODUCTION

Young men and women in their junior year in high school — seeking the challenge of a service academy — have a rare opportunity to try academy life first hand, thanks to the Coast Guard Auxiliary's Academy Introduction Mission (AIM). Every August, the Coast Guard's civilian volunteer arm sends a select number of students to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Connecticut to sample the life of a typical fourth classman (freshman). The free five day glimpse at Coast Guard life, made possible by the sponsoring Auxiliary units, includes all transportation costs from any point in the U.S.

Local Coast Guard Auxiliary units will interview prospective candidates during February and March. Basic eligibility requirements are: 1) not over 18 years of age, nor under 15; 2) good scholastic record, preferably in upper 25% of his or her class (PSAT score over 1000); 3) must be in junior (third) year in a regional or state accredited high school; 4) strong in math and science; 5) eyesight 20/20 or correctable to 20/20; 6) general good health, without handicaps or defects; 7) leadership potential, and sincere interest in the humanitarian aims of the U.S. Coast Guard.

For more information about this year's project AIM, contact: Edward Leclair, DSO/CC, 23 Newhall St., Lowell, MA. 01852, telephone 458-0668.

EASTER SEAL FASHION SHOW

The Massachusetts Easter Seal Society will benefit from the 3rd Annual Fashion Show sponsored by Mary Kay Cosmetics in Greater New England on Saturday, March 7 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Proceeds from the event will be presented on the 1987 Easter Seal Telethon on WSBK-TV38, March 7 and 8.

Uma Pemmaraju, a reporter for WLVI-TV56, News at 10, will host the event along with 7 year old Amanda Cicero, Easter Seal State Child from Boston and Anne Newbury of Reading, National Sales Director for Mary Kay Cosmetics.

All are invited to attend this fashion show on Saturday, March 7, at the Park Plaza Hotel from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tickets may be purchased through Mrs. Anne Newbury, c/o The Easter Seal Fashion Show Benefit, 607 Pearl Street, Reading, MA. 01867.

Checks should be made payable to the Easter Seal Fashion Show Benefit. For more information please call 944-7666 or 482-3370. Proceeds from the event will support programs and services conducted by the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society for children and adults with disabilities.

LEXINGTON GALLERY

Depot Square Artists are presenting a three person show in the main gallery, "Recent Work" paintings by Betty Carmell Savenor, Lexington and Nancy C. Eddy, Framingham, with ceramics by Arlayne Peterson, Lexington at 1837 Massachusetts Avenue (lower level), Lexington March 5 to March 31. The reception, which is open to the public, is Sunday, March 8, from 3 to 6 p.m. with a snowdate of March 15. No admission charge. Gallery hours are: Tuesday-Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. In the gallery wing are paintings of two Wilmington artists Andrea Peters and Kate Fournaris.

BLOODMOBILES

American Red Cross Bloodmobiles scheduled in the Eastern Middlesex Region are as follows:

Thursday, February 26, Malden Hospital, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Thursday, February 26, Melrose-Wakefield Hospital, 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Monday, March 2, Colonial Hilton, Wakefield, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

WEEKEND TAX FRIEND

The Boston Internal Revenue Service District began a pilot weekend telephone tax tip service February 14, which could become a model for the rest of the nation.

The daily toll-free number 1-800-424-1040 will be activated on both Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

For additional free information on numerous tax subjects call 1-800-424-FORM and ask for Publication 910, "Guide to Free Tax Services."

HIGH TECH WOMEN

Women, are you interested in a high tech career? Come to an open house at the Women's Technical Institute in Boston, meet graduates of the electronics and drafting programs. Tour the computer labs, meet instructors, and find out if a career as an electronic technician, field service engineers, or computer aided drafter is for you. Call the Women's Technical Institute at 266-2243 for more information or just stop by on Wednesday, March 4 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. The institute is located at 1255 Boylston Street, Boston.

BOSTON TO PARIS

Reflecting optimism about the prospect for travel to Europe this summer, Air France will resume scheduled passenger service between Boston and Paris on April 5.

Flights will depart from Logan International Airport on Thursday and Sunday evenings, with return flights from Paris to Boston on Thursday and Sunday as well. All are non-stop 747s.

Air France already serves Boston with 747 freighters carrying cargo exclusively. The airline linked Boston and Paris with passenger service from 1948 to 1976, when service was suspended. Charter flights were introduced in 1985 through the Air France subsidiary Air Charter.

For information and reservations, contact a travel specialist or Air France, Suite 306, 545 Boylston Street, Boston, Ma. 02116, or telephone toll-free 1-800-AF-PARIS.

RELATING TO PEOPLE

When it comes to running their own businesses, entrepreneurs and independent business owners say their primary problem is in relating with people — recruiting and managing employees and working with partners, according to a survey by Laventhol & Horwath, the national business, financial counseling and accounting firm.

In contrast, most entrepreneurs think they have no difficulty in understanding their customers, according to the Laventhol & Horwath study, "The Challenge to Entrepreneurs," a poll of companies with annual sales between $5 million and $50 million.

"The entrepreneur sometimes makes such an all encompassing commitment to understanding his clients and their needs that he overlooks the need to commit similar energies to be able to effectively work with his employees and partners," said David Love, Partner-in-Charge, in the Boston Office of L&H, the firm whose clients are primarily privately held, entrepreneurial businesses, many of which are family owned.

When asked to respond in their own words to the question: "What do you consider to be the biggest problem in running your business at the present time?" a remarkable percent said they have problems associated with employees or partners. Finding good, professional or motivated personnel was the difficulty most frequently cited.

But the same percentage who noted they purchased the existing company said they have little or no difficulty obtaining capital.

The analysis released today is based on a recent poll of a random sample of some 200 owners — presidents and Ceos — of industrial and service companies throughout the United States.

A chat with affable Roddy McDowall

BOSTON — Jotting down notes as he spoke, Roddy McDowall's mind appeared to be racing light years ahead of the rest of him during a recent conversation in his suite at the Ritz-Carlton. McDowall would occasionally rise from his wing-backed chair and bob around the room, looking for bits of paper to scribble down his thoughts as he spoke.

The actor was in town to promote his latest film, Dead of Winter, in which he plays the warped assistant to a sinister doctor who is involved in a wild kidnapping caper.

While critics have labelled the movie as yet another homage to Alfred Hitchcock, McDowall disagreed. "I think it's a film that's origins are in a lot of movies in the 30s and 40s, not just Hitchcock. I don't think it has to do with Hitch, it's triggered by that whole family of film, whether it be Spiral Staircase or Wait Until Dark or Gaslight. So I don't think it's peculiarly to do with Hitchcock, it has to do with that genre, which is hardly dealt with anymore, that sheer melodrama in a confined space.

"I don't know why. It's concentrated and it's in a small area. They're great fun. They're predictable, and the audience is in on the adventure, which is part of the fun of that material. Sometimes they're done and sent up, but it's very seldom seen done anymore."

Soft-spoken, with a slightly clipped British accent, the nattily dressed, slight McDowall bears little resemblance to the actor who spent a lot of time in an ape suit during all those Planet of the Apes movies, froliced with Flicka as a youth and came back as a vampire in 1985's Fright Night. Keeping with his trend of always choosing diversified parts, McDowall is going to work in a comedy next month with Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell, which he is also co-producing.

While people remember McDowall, 59, as the sweet, gentle youth in a myriad of films released around World War II, he said he doesn't think he projects any specific image as an adult. "I don't think somebody who's spent a long time being an ape, and etc. etc., various other things, can be accused of having a specific image. I suppose it's for other people to decide, I can't. I just hope that everything has a difference about it. I don't think this is in any way a parallel for Fright Night or Fright Night is to be compared with Class of 1984 or Legend of Hell House or so on and so forth. I don't think there's a similarity. Or the character I played in the TV series Tales of the Gold Monkey. Hopefully one does different things."

One of a handful of survivors who lasted a lifetime in the entertainment industry, McDowall has seen the business change over the years. "I suppose 1938 and 1939 were banner years for film. But we have to remember that in those years film was the major form of entertainment, probably in the world. Theatre and radio were very popular, but motion pictures were the mass entertainment form. Now it's split between movies and television and also music. So, there's a tremendous split attention on entertainment.

"If you jam together all the television films made, plus theatrical movies, you would have an abundance of film. There are many television films that are crackingly good, except they don't have the same occasion for the public as theatrical films do. But, there's much less theatrical product, which is sad, because movies on a big screen are really terrific to see. We also have the cassette market now, which is enormous."

Now a Los Angeles resident, McDowall was born in England, but emigrated to America during the war. "I started to work in England while I was very young and World War II broke out and my father sent my mother and sister and myself to America after the first battle of Britain. It was just one of those flukes that happened very quickly and I got a role in a film called How Green was My Valley, which triggered my childhood career which lasted about five years. Then I had to go looking for a job, 'cause the jig was up."

McDowall travelled to New York after the work in Hollywood had dried up and supported himself by working in live television, radio and theatre. And, for a time in the 60s, he made a living as a photographer, publishing layouts for such magazines as Look and Life. He now dabbles in photography, occasionally snapping portraits, but said he spends most of his time working.

"I have a very peculiar reaction to the preconceived notion to the fact that actors should be like fruit pickers, they work here and they work there. I think one should be constantly at work, I think it's healthy...If I'm not employed even, I'm working. The problem with most actors is they only get paid for a brief amount of the time that they're working, because they're only employed in a minimum span during their working life," stated McDowall.

ON YOUR FEET

LASER FOOT SURGERY

Laser Surgery is one of the newest and most significant applications of laser technology in the last two decades. Laser Surgery takes advantage of intense heat generating properties to cut and remove tissue without the undesirable side effects that sometimes result from using a scalpel. The laser produces a man-made light that has only one color and does not produce any undesirable radiation. The laser we use is a Carbondioxide Laser and it is the most versatile of the medical lasers.

In our office we now use this laser technology in the removal of warts and other skin lesions of the foot. Studies have now shown and the "jury is in" on this new method for the treatment of plantars warts. Warts to be removed are identified, anesthetized with local anesthesia if necessary and "lased" with short bursts of laser light. Not only does the laser remove the warty tissue, but it also stops the bleeding and prevents the swelling that usually results in post-opcrative discomfort. Not only is this treatment effective, but discomfort and limitations are minimal.

Michael Gottlieb. Produced by Art Levinson. Written by Edward Rugoff and Gottlieb. Rated PG (profanity).

If you look back at the history of successful film fantasies, you'll notice a common trait. Movies such as Here Comes Mr. Jordan, its remake Heaven Can Wait, Topper, Splash, Back to the Future, all dealt with situations that were completely out of the realm of possibility. However, such absurdities as mermaids, time travel and apparitions were treated as reality. These movies gave us a glowing feeling of happiness and a belief in the power of imagination. Mannequin, on the other hand, leaves you with that sinking feeling of having been taken for five bucks.

The story of a department store dummy that comes to life was done with much more class and warmth in the 1948 movie One Touch of Venus. In this updated version, there is so little attention focused on the original story of a man and his mannequin that one gets the feeling director Michael Gottlieb forgot to read the script. By the time the sub-plots about warring department stores, a bigoted cop and a lot of MTV-type romps through the department store are tossed your way, the movie loses all pretense of being a sweet fantasy and takes on the tone of a Crazy Eddie commercial.

Andrew McCarthy as the sculptor who creates the mannequin he falls in love with is affable enough as he grins his way through this silly movie. And Kim Cattrall does her best as the living doll, but aside from posing in a myriad of costumes, it's a thankless, underdeveloped role. Instead of concentrating on this unusual couple, Gottlieb focuses our attention on such idiotic characters as G.W. Bailey's salivating security guard, the same bigot he's played before in the Police Academy movies and James Spader's smarmy sycophant.

The worst of the lot is Hollywood, a swishy window dresser decked out in pink satins and wild sunglasses. The writers who created this stereotypical designer should be made to write "Gay jokes are in bad taste" 1,000 times while wearing thumb screws. Not that actor Meshach Taylor didn't do wonders with the role, he just about stole the show. But a good actor should not be reduced to prancing and mincing just to get a laugh. And a smart moviegoer will go see something else.

In Reading

A new breed of home seller

READING — A new breed of home seller has helped to change the way brokers go after new business, according to local real estate broker Jack Webb.

Webb's company, Real Estate Advantage of Reading provides a variety of services to sellers of residential and commercial real estate. The most popular service is a 1.9 percent commission agreement where Real Estate Advantage does everything a full service broker does except actually show the property. For a 1.9 percent fee at closing Real Estate Advantage will; help price the property, supply professional signs, provide all newspaper advertising, screen prospective buyers, set up appointments for the seller to show the property, accept offers, negotiate the selling price, prepare the purchase and sale agreements, and assist the buyer in securing financing.

"We're seeing a new phenomenon now," Webb says, "because people selling homes in this area have become much more sophisticated. As prices of homes rise, standard commissions are topping $10,000 and people are beginning to ask whether they really need that much service.

"What we do is the stuff that the seller can't do or doesn't want to do including: pricing, preparing and placing advertising, taking phone calls, screening and qualifying prospective buyers, negotiating the price, preparing the paperwork and coordinating the closing. The seller saves us a tremendous amount of time by showing the property himself. The whole process is very efficient and everyone benefits.

"After all, a $5,000 to $10,000 savings can mean a new car or a year's tuition at college. It's easy to lose sight of that in a big transaction like selling your home."

Webb feels that the trend towards the owner taking a more active role in the sale of their property will grow over the next few years. "Think about closing and refinancing costs," Webb notes. "People will shop around for banks if they're dissatisfied because one bank is asking two points at closing and another is asking only a point and a half. Here we're talking about saving up to five percent of the selling price, that adds up to real money. Sooner or later people are going to realize that there are huge potential savings in this area.

One more for the record books

"Records were made to be broken," goes the old saying. That's especially true for one Swedish taxi driver who shattered his previous endurance record by driving the same car a distance equal to 25 trips around the globe — that's about 620,000 miles if you don't have a calculator handy. His record in a previous car was 403,000 miles.

Incidentally, both records were set in his Saab 900 Turbos, one a 1979, but the most recent record set in his 1982 model.

"It has become a challenge to drive my taxi as long as I can before trading it in," says James Bergkvist, a taxi operator in Marsta, north of Stockholm. He says he has no plans to turn in his 1982 Saab at the present time.

What's his secret for getting his money's worth and then some from his automobiles?

"One of the reasons why the engine has stood up so well certainly is that I have used a first-class motor oil and changed the oil every 10,000 kilometers," he notes. Ten-thousand kilometers is slightly more than 6,200 miles.

Mr. Bergkvist notes that on occasion the engine has been inspected, but that wear is minimal. The engine block, crankshaft, connecting rods, pistons and bearings have never been replaced. Remember now — this is a car with more than a half-million miles on its odometer.

"I have kept careful records and I know exactly what has happened to the car during the first one million kilometers," (620,000 miles) the hack says offering some statistics:

— 70 percent of the total distance the '82 Saab Turbo has traveled (700,000 km/435,000 mi.) have been with fare-paying passengers; average number of passengers, two;

— average fuel consumption — approximately 9 litres/100 km (appx. 26 mpg)

"The car naturally needed some repairs and new parts," Mr. Bergkvist notes, "but the parts that needed replacing lasted three-to-four times longer than is normal on a car used commercially.

But what may be most surprising (except to Mr. Bergkvist) is that his Saab kept its original exhaust system for more than 500,000 km. (310,700 mi.).

"That's probably not all that remarkable," Mr. Bergkvist scoffs. "A taxi that's in constant use will seldom have a chance to cool down. So the exhaust system always runs under the best possible operating conditions, with very little condensation and uniformly high temperature at all times."

SHOPPING BAG ART

Abercrombie's jungle-inspired design (top r.); I. Magnin's Christmas bag (center); Bloomingdale's classic 1982 Matisse cutout bag (l.)

By Ellen Steese
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Boston

One cultural advantage to living in a country with a lot of trees and a talent for technology is that you get gorgeous designer shopping bags – tiny works of modern art that you can carry your sneakers or lunch in.

Designer bags, in their present highly colorful form, have been around since the '60s, a time of originality and change when people realized that there were a lot of surfaces – matchbooks, menus, record jackets – that made a handy little canvas with a built-in captive audience.

The whole phenomenon is a symbol of affluence. 'We can even afford to ornament our throwaways.'

Since then, shopping bags have become a way for a store to announce that it is setting off fireworks, or has just opened, or is otherwise a glamorous presence in the business community. This is known as "theatrics" in the trade, according to Stephen Wagner, who, with Michael L. Closen, has just written "The Shopping Bag: Portable Art" (Crown Publishers, $24.95).

Shopping bags are one of those things people like but don't think about much. The Smithsonian, often referred to as "the nation's attic," recently concluded a immensively popular five-year touring exhibit of hundreds of bags. "People can relate to it," says Elaine Evans Dee, curator of Prints and Drawings of New York's Cooper-Hewitt Museum, a branch of the Smithsonian. "It brought something to their attention which they took for granted. They'd look at a bag and say, 'Oh yes, that really is good.' "

There are problems with the shopping bag as an artifact: primarily its fragility. After its tour, the Smithsonian's collection was "pretty much soiled and tattered, so they have accepted our shopping bags to replace their old collection," says Mr. Wagner.

His collection, which is stored at the Cooper-Hewitt, consists of over 1,000 bags, even though he has only been collecting for five years. "I kind of by accident discovered that I was keeping shopping bags because the graphics on the back were just too interesting and unusual to throw away," he says.

It may seem like an odd hobby, but Wagner, who has a degree in fine arts, says he knows a lot of shopping bag collectors – mostly artists like himself. It is

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

Over the Top Short Takes

Over the Top starring Sylvester Stallone, David Mendenhall, Robert Loggia. Directed by Menahem Golan. Produced by Stirling Silliphant and Stallone. Produced by Golan and Yoram Globus. Rated PG (profanity).

Well, well, well. Isn't this an interesting concept? A two-bit underdog of a truckdriver stakes everything he owns to take a shot at a world championship. It this was 1976 and the movie Rocky, then yes, it would be an innovative idea. But since it's 1987 and as Sylvester Stallone has already played this part in four Rocky movies, you would think he'd be embarassed by doing it again. Apparently money, not pride, goeth before the fall.

Instead of boxing, Stallone plays an arm wrestler, and instead of trying to win Adrianne, Stallone is attempting to build a relationship with his estranged son. For a while it looked as though the father-son relationship would save the movie, but Stallone isn't a good enough actor to come across as warm and caring. Arrogant and self-aggrandizing are far better adjectives.

The reason the original Rocky worked was because Stallone knew how to milk that old chestnut about local boy does good. It was a heartfelt tribute to the losers of the world. Over the Top is more an exercise formulated film making. No one doubts that rosy-cheeked David Mendenhall will come to admire his dad. But, will Stallone lose custody of his little boy to the money grubbing character played by Robert Loggia? Will Stallone win the arm-wrestling match in Vegas? What do you think?

The problem isn't just that the movie unfolds by rote, but that Stallone comes across as smug and untouchable when he's supposed to be guilt-ridden and loving. Someone else in the role would have made a difference. However, if you are still awake by the climax, the pace does pick up, thanks to the wild antics and documentary-style editing of the arm wrestling match. That last 20 minutes have the makings of a real movie. It's too bad you have to sit through 70 minutes of pap to get there.

Short Takes

From the Hip is a formulated, off-center attack on the legal profession that is supposed to be funny, but isn't. Director Bob Porky's Clark lost control of the film almost immediately and let it careen out of control until it stops dead in its own laugh tracks. Rated PG. *

Black Widow is an odd mix of Theresa Russell's crackling sexuality, a plot full of murder and mystery, direction that is too soft and a backdrop that is too pretty. While it isn't a bad psychological drama, the elements don't quite gel. However, Russell, who plays four characters, rises above her surroundings in a stellar performance as the woman who mates, and then kills. Rated R. * * *

Dead of Winter has all the earmarks of a creeky, Gothic thriller, but doesn't quite make it past the props. So much time is spent setting us up that by the time the plot blunders by we are one step ahead of it. If director Arthur Penn had stopped aping Alfred Hitchcock and applied more of his own style, what chills there are would have seemed less manipulative. Rated R.* *

Light of Day emerges as a gritty rock 'n' roll film, only to be taken over by the sub-plots. The movie trips over itself until dullness glosses over even the earthy performance of Joan Jett as a rebellious young woman born to rock. By the time her mother, played by an unconvincing Gena Rowlands, contracts a fatal disease, the movie has taken on a new identity that careens right over the original storyline. Rated PG-13.m * *

My Sweet Little Village is a delightful comedy that brings to life a sleepy Czech village. The characters are richly textured in this highly visual story about a truck driver and his simple mate. The warm humor and touching sentiment transcends language barriers to happily reaffirm small town life. Rated PG. * * * ½

Radio Days is Woody Allen's sentimental tribute to the glory days of radio in the 40s. A series of vignettes tied together with wonderful old tunes and disarming characters, this is one of the rare films that will give you goosebumps as you laugh. Perhaps not one of his most "important" films, but certainly his warmest. Rated PG. * * * *

Outrageous Fortunes takes Bette Midler and Shelley Long on the road as these "pals" seek out the man who done them wrong. Bumpy, raw and funny, the riotous dialogue is brought to life by prissy Long and vulgar Midler in one of the best cinematic couplings in years. This is a side-splitting success. Rated R. * * * *

Critical Condition could be the death of Richard Pryor at the box office, since he bears the brunt of the painfully boring movie. There isn't a successful sight gag or joke in this ambulatory flick that is sort of about a con man, mental patients and hospital administration. Rated R. * ½

Bedroom Window is a true homage to Hitchcock, as this thriller takes an innocent man and forces him to break the law to prove he's not a murderer. Steve Guttenberg will have you on the edge of your seats as he stalks the rapist/murderer who set him up. We know whodunnit, and so does Guttenberg, but the fun comes in as we watch him go after the creepy redhead who has been terrorizing the women of Baltimore. Rated R.* * *

Platoon is unequivocably, absolutely and without exception the best war movie ever made. It makes all those Rambo, revisionist films look like the fairy tales they really are. Director Oliver Stone presents the Viet Nam War as the dirty, irrational and bloody proof that war isn't a romantic escapade. Tom Berenger and Willem Dafoe are standouts as opposing sergeants, one representing civilization and the other barbarism in a movie that should not be missed by anyone over the age of 10. Rated R. * * * *

Brighton Beach Memoirs is more about the grueling effects of the Depression than a laugh-a-minute Neil Simon comedy, and is much better for being more emotional than slapstick. In this autobiographical film, Simon has laid bare his outer shell of humor to give us a warm and touching portrait of a family that isn't glamorous or has sophisticated problems, but is very real. Rated PG-13* * *½

Little Shop of Horrors is an up-beat, be-bop of a musical that has successfully survived the transfer from a 1960 cult movie to a musical stage production and now back to a movie that is adapted from the play. The plot, about the weird relationship between a carnivorous plant and a schmucky Jewish florist's assistant isn't the key here, but the talented cast and finger-snapping songs are. The only problem is that the glitzy ending loses the gritty humor of both the original movie and the play. Rated PG-13 * * *

the kind of hobby that offers the lure of the hunt. "I put the word out to friends – especially when anybody was traveling out of town, to keep an eye open for shopping bags," Wagner says. "Sometimes I have to restrain myself from asking people, 'Where did you get that bag?' "

Mrs. Dee points out that another collector's item, 19th-century bandboxes (used for hats or collars), could be considered a predecessor of today's shopping bag. She does not think of the bags as art: "We don't really make those distinctions. We think of what's good design and we're interested in how design affects our lives," she says. Along with posters – "both are meant to be looked at and discarded" – shopping bags display the most "current" styles of design, she says. The whole phenomenon is a symbol of affluence, she says. "We can even afford to ornament our throwaways."

The whole process of making a shopping bag is a lot more involved than people realize, says Wagner. For instance, there is a printing process, called flexography, which is specifically used for shopping bags. In 1981, a technological breakthrough in flexography made the use of photographs on shopping bags possible.

Paging though Wagner's book makes you wish you had been more on the ball collecting bags yourself. Bloomingdale's has a reputation for the best bags: its 1982 Matisse cutout bag, in steel blue, pink, and jade (this deserves a place on the wall); also its big brown bag that says, simply, Big Brown Bag. Abercrombie's has had a whole series of sophisticated bags with animal skin designs – zebra, tiger, and leopard, while a clever Hudson's men store shopping bag is shaped like a businessman's satchel.

Christmas in particular inspires a lot of shopping bag designers: Erté's Christmas bag for I. Magnin features a stylized woman whose hair is in the form of a Christmas tree; another I. Magnin bag features New Yorker cartoonist Koren's funny, shaggy "monsters" as Santa and his reindeer going carolling.

"One thing that's really exciting that's happening is a sense of humor," says Wagner. "A lot of stores are using animators and cartoonists – that's really great to see. There are some bags that make you laugh. . . ."

Shopping bags give a commercial enterprise the opportunity to associate itself with wit and Great Art. And it gives the purchaser a chance to inform whomever is passing that he is a person of taste and distinction who insists on the finest and thus only patronizes stores that charge top dollar. "It's kind of like a designer label," Wagner says.

It makes art available, in a way, to everyone. It can be a sad and incongruous sight to see a bag lady walking up the street with all her possessions in a shopping bag from an expensive store, discarded by the original purchaser. But, says Wagner, "Looking at it from an artist's point of view, I think it's wonderful. Why should she have a bag that's brown and ugly? Why can't she have a beautiful bag too?"

$1 BILLION KOREANS

A Korean buying mission, led by Korean Minister of Trade and Industry Woong-Bae Rha, will tour Boston, March 5-7 and 30 other cities to purchase U.S. products totaling over $1 billion. The purpose of the mission is two-fold: 1) to establish important new business relationships with American suppliers, and 2) to keep trade between the two nations expanding in a balanced and mutually beneficial way.

This mission, the eighth of its kind, reflects a renewed commitment by the Korean government to encourage Korean companies to build stronger relationships with their American counterparts. To foster these ties, representatives traveling with the delegation will meet with U.S. business executives and state government officials to explore investment opportunities and to promote trade. Companies represented in the delegation include some of Korea's leading trading companies, such as Samsung, Hyundai, Dae Woo, Lucky-Gold Star, Korean Airlines and Hanil Textiles.

PEAK PERFORMANCE FOR WOMEN

PSI, the world's largest secretarial association, "Route 128" Chapter, has announced that it will sponsor a special program on March 7, from 9:30 to 3:30 at Middlesex Community College, Burlington Campus. The program will feature nationally known authority Dr. Valerie Young.

Dr. Young is a nationally known seminar leader and professional speaker for organizations within both the private and public sector. She has designed and conducted training programs on professional development for women, the "impostor syndrome," management and leadership development, sexism and racism awareness, cross-cultural counseling, managing diversity, and increasing the effectiveness of managers who supervise women.

The deadline for registration is February 28. Interested persons should call Debbie Webb at 470-2900.

MANAGING A NON-PROFIT

"Management of Non-Profit Organizations," a ten-week course, is being offered by Northeastern University Tuesday evenings in downtown Boston and Wednesday evenings in Burlington, starting the week of April 6. It is worth three undergraduate college credits but may be audited.

The course gives an introductory look at the techniques and tools of managing non-profits, such as those in the arts, education, medicine, politics, and religion. Governance, membership, finances, development, and marketing strategy will be covered.

For more information and to register, contact University College, Northeastern University, at 437-2400, or 437-2418.

IRA UPDATE

Tax reform changes to IRAs have been summarized in a revised edition of Fidelity Investments' IRA Owner's Guide. The comprehensive, non-promotional Guide is available free to all interested consumers.

In addition to explaining 1986 IRA rules, the new edition outlines tax-law changes that become effective in 1987. Included is information on age and income restrictions, deductibility guidelines, investment options, transfer instructions, and withdrawal requirements.

The booklet also contains a record-keeping section offering a simple format for tracking most types of IRA investments and a list of periodicals, newsletters, and associations that provide information on retirement investing.

To request a free copy of the IRA Owner's Guide, or any of Fidelity's other educational guides, consumers can call Fidelity Investments in Massachusetts at 523-1919.

NEW FINANCING FOR SMALL BUSINESS

The Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency (MIFA) recently announced a new financing program with the sale of its first pooled taxable Industrial Development Bond (IDB) — the first of its kind in the country.

The $7.8 million publicly sold taxable bond, backed by a letter of credit from Essexbank of Peabody, will finance three industrial expansion projects for companies north of Boston, creating 65 new jobs in the Commonwealth.

MIFA's first pooled taxable bond is financing expansion projects for three companies north of Boston: Hansen Engineering & Machinery Company of Danvers; M.O.M., Inc. of North Reading; and PAL Realty Trust of Lynn.

Successful job hunting requires preparation

More people will be looking for work this year than in any year in the history of the country. This is the result of layoffs to reduce personnel, mergers, career changes, ordinary labor turnover and other factors. Add to that the recent graduates looking for work and it is apparent that the competition for available jobs will be intense in the coming year.

"Anyone looking for a white collar job will have to stand out from the crowd," says Robert L. Berko of the Consumer Education Research Center.

The non-profit center has just completed a survey of personnel people to find out how they make their choice from a number of applicants with similar qualification. CERC has distilled this into a "how to" book entitled "A Job-Hunters Guide, How to Locate and Land the Job You Want."

"The cover letter that is sent with the resume should be highly personalized," Mr. Berko says. "It should make the prospective employer feel that this is the only company for which the jobseeker wishes to work."

The book has a special section on turning the prospective employer's objections into opportunities for you t show yourself at your best.

Merchandising your talents is not a haphazard effort. There are more people competing for the good jobs than there are jobs available. "The well-prepared will get the jobs," says Mr. Berko, Job-Hunter's Guide, available from CERC, P.O.Box 336, South Orange,N.J. 07079 for $4, shows the applicant how to find a suitable opening and takes her through the process until she has the job she wants.

The last twenty pages of the book are dedicated to advice for those who are changing careers or reentering the workforce at midlife. There are detailed directions to show you how to assess the activities you do outside your former job to determine the career that will bring you satisfaction and proper financial rewards.

Bradbury, "Worthy Advisor;" Laurel Gore, "Worthy Associate Advisor;" and Jennifer Park, "Hope." My wife Kathy was not a Rainbow girl, but I wish she was because I know Diane Higden of Burlington was one and she is one of the most wonderful young ladies I know. I know the other members are just like Diane. My wife thought I had the "pot of gold" and married me for my money. She found out I was broke and was a little over weight.

Ralph Gidding from North Reading is a former Marine and now is a "King of the Road," driving one of those massive 18 wheelers. His wife Dorothea makes winter hats with a knitting machine. Son Paul is a geologist and Ralph is with the post office and lovely daughter, Jeanette works at the South Postal Annex. They are all readers of Woodchips.

Folks, it seems to me that when you are right, no one remembers. When you are wrong, no one forgets. Ladies, never be the first one to leave a garden club meeting or an afternoon tea. The talk about you may make "Jack the Ripper" look like a choir boy."

COLD FACTS ABOUT THE COMMON COLD

THE COMMON COLD: FACT VS. MYTH

Modern medicine has brought us a long way toward understanding, preventing and treating the common cold. But, according to a recent survey, many Americans still subscribe to some common-cold fallacies:

MYTH: Kissing spreads colds.

FACT: According to the latest scientific evidence, hand contact, not kissing, sneezing or coughing, is the most common means of transmission. The rhinovirus, which accounts for up to half of all colds, does not survive well in saliva.

MYTH: Getting caught in a draft or not wearing enough warm clothing in the winter will cause you to catch a cold.

FACT: Scientists have shown that exposure to cold weather has nothing to do with contracting a cold. Weather factors have no effect on a person's immunity to cold viruses.

MYTH: If you have a cold, there's nothing to do but wait it out.

FACT: Most doctors advise a common-sense approach to ease symptoms during the seven to 10 days a cold usually lasts, including: rest, staying comfortable, drinking plenty of liquids and not smoking. Just as important as rest and proper diet, is use of an over-the-counter cold medication.

Such products are quite effective in relieving symptoms of sneezing, runny nose and congestion. There are numerous brands for sale over-the-counter; one of the most familiar is CONTAC®, which contains both an anthistamine and decongestant in a 12-hour continuous action formula.

The decongestant reduces swelling of the nasal passages, which relieves congestion and allows you to breathe easier, while the antihistamine dries up the excess secretions and decreases the sneezing associated with the common cold.

MYTH: Colds aren't serious and the best thing to do is ignore them.

FACT: While most colds clear up without aftereffects, colds can sometimes progress to such conditions as sinusitis, ear infections, bronchitis or pneumonia. Older people, young children, pregnant women or those with serious health problems such as diabetes, heart disease or asthma, may feel the effects of a cold more severely or may develop complications. Anyone in these risk groups who experiences cold symptoms should consult a doctor. In addition, many other illnesses, including mononucleosis, flu and pneumonia often begin with cold-like symptoms and a physician should be called if symptoms worsen after a few days.

To receive a free CONTAC® "Cold Facts About the Common Cold" brochure, write to: CONTAC®, P.O. Box 10000, Dept. W, Long Island City, NY 11101.

Join us at our JOB FAIR

Saturday, February 28th
9AM–1PM
Medical Electronics Laboratories
16 Electronics Ave.
Danvers Industrial Park
Danvers, MA

Medical Electronics Laboratories, Inc. is a recently-formed Joint Venture between Analogic Corporation and Siemens AG. The Company was formed out of the Patient Monitoring Group of Analogic which, for the past six years, has provided sophisticated patient monitoring equipment to the medical market. Due to the greater than anticipated worldwide acceptance of a new line of monitoring equipment, M.E.L. has several openings in our Manufacturing and Quality Control areas.

We have openings for:

- Printed Circuit Assemblers
- Senior Test Technicians (5 years' experience required)
- Mechanical Assemblers
- Solder Touch-Up Assemblers
- In-Process Inspection Personnel (1–2 years' experience required)
- Final Inspection Personnel (1–2 years' experience required)
- Stock Kit Clerks

Unless otherwise indicated, positions are available for both entry level as well as experienced personnel. Openings are available for all positions for both 1st and 2nd shift.

If you have experience in any of the above areas, or are willing to learn, come ready to be interviewed—and ready to enjoy a more satisfying career as part of a new organization in an important, rapidly-expanding industry. Remember, with two companies this good, this is one Job Fair you don't want to miss! All positions are available at our conveniently-located facility in the Danvers Industrial Park on Route 1, just off Route 62, in Danvers.

But if you just can't make it on the 28th, you can still apply by sending a resume to Medical Electronics Laboratories, Inc., Personnel Dept., 16 Electronics Avenue, Danvers, MA 01923, or by calling our EMPLOYMENT HOTLINE at 777-1401, ext. 1552. Please note, we share facilities with Data Precision.

Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

Foster adoption needs

We look high and low for events of all types and stripes. If you have knowledge of a happening of interest to all, write, care of this local newspaper and tell COMING ATTRACTIONS all about it. We range from adoption to antiques.

FOSTER/ADOPTION NEEDS

The offer of a home could be the greatest gift you could give to a displaced child. And every day thousands of families across the United States give this and more to infants, young children, and teen-agers from all walks of life. There's not much monetary reward or media recognition for these caretakers of our nation's children. But now there is something special...something created just for families with foster and/or adoptive children.

This something special is a publication called Wednesday's Family. A bimonthly, national magazine, Wednesday's Family will be devoted exclusively to the issues, problems, joys, and successes unique to people who share their lives and their love with children in crisis.

Wednesday's Family will premier in mid-April. Topics covered in the debut issue include dealing with troubled adolescents, vacation planning, insurance needs, coping with unknown medical histories, and stories by a foster mother, an adoptive father, a teen-ager in foster care, and a young person who has learned to share his life with many foster brothers and sisters.

To receive more information on this one-of-a-kind publication, you may write to: Wednesday's Family, P.O. Box 1675, Gloucester, MA. 01930.

NEWBURYPORT ANTIQUES

For North Shore antique lovers, the National Guard Armory on Low Street in Newburyport is the place to be on March 13, 14 and 15. The Custom House Maritime Museum of Newburyport, Mass. will sponsor its Eighth Annual Antiques Show on those dates.

The three day event will begin with a champagne preview party on Friday, March 13, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tickets are available in advance for $20.00 per person and may be obtained at the Custom House Maritime Museum, 25 Water Street, Newburyport, or by calling 462-8681. Tickets will be $25. per person at the door.

On Saturday, March 14, the show will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. On Sunday, March 15, the hours will be noon to 5 p.m. General admission price is $2.50. Luncheon and light refreshments will be available both days, catered by Middle Street Foods of Newburyport.

For further information about ticket purchases, please call The Custom House Maritime Museum of Newburyport at 465-8681.

BOSTON BY FOOT

A special type of volunteer is being sought in Boston: someone with sturdy legs, a keen mind, and a love of the city's architecture. Boston By Foot, a nonprofit educational corporation, was established in 1976 to promote public awareness of Boston's rich architectural heritage. During the past ten years, trained Boston By Foot volunteer guides have explored the city with over 30,000 visitors and residents.

Participants will meet at the Boston Architectural Center, 320 Newbury Street, Boston. Saturday sessions last from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Wednesday session lasts from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuition is $65.00 for future guides, $85.00 for auditors. Advance registration is necessary. For further information please contact: Boston By Foot, 77 North Washington Street, Boston, MA. 02114. Telephone: 367-2345.

RED CROSS MONTH

A fire forces a family out into the street at 2 a.m. Who finds them shelter? A baby chokes on a piece of food. How does its mother know what to do? A man needs emergency surgery after a motorcycle accident. Who provides the necessary blood?

March is American Red Cross month — a time to reflect on over 100 years of service as well as look at the future needs of the community.

The public is invited to attend an "Orientation to the Red Cross" which will cover such topics as the history of the American Red Cross, services and programs and volunteer opportunities. Two sessions will be offered: Tuesday, March 3, 7:30 to 9 p.m. and Thursday, March 5, 10 to 11:30 a.m., both at the Melrose office, 786 Main Street.

Last year, in the Eastern Middlesex Region, 4580 First Aid and CPR Certificates were issued, and in the Reading/North Reading area 136 trips were made to local and Boston Hospitals and doctors' offices, 670 blood pressures were taken and 710 units of blood were donated.

Current volunteer needs in the Eastern Middlesex Region include drivers for medical appointments, substitute receptionists and telephone committee coordinators for the communities of Malden, Stoneham and Wakefield. For more information about these and other opportunities, please call the Office of Volunteers at 665-1351.

OLD-FASHIONED POTATO CHIPS

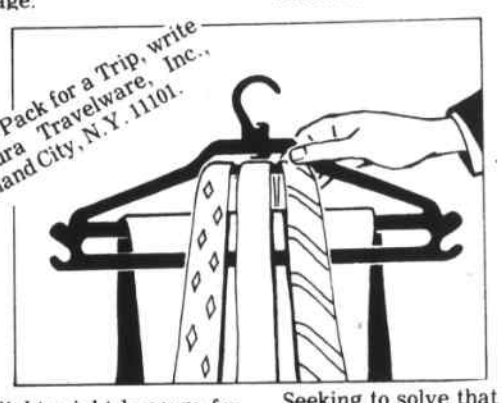

Potato chip lovers are invited to visit the Cape Cod Company in Hyannis to see firsthand how Cape Cod potato chips are made the natural, old fashioned way.

Free tours of the Cape Cod Company, located on Breed's Hill Road, Independence Park, Hyannis, are offered from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday. No reservation is necessary. For more information call 775-3358.

Carry-on luggage problems

During the next year, nearly half of all luggage, estimates such leaders of the luggage industry as Walter Bialo, Chairman of Ventura Travelware, of Long Island City, N.Y. and a past president of the Luggage and Leather Manufacturers Assoc., will be of the carry-on designs. Increasingly youthful American Luggage buyers are opting for under-seat or overhead storage constructions or for one of the increasingly popular garment bag shapes for men and women.

Both the under-seat and garment bag designs offer over-the-shoulder straps which leave hands free for tickets and boarding passes, a magazine, book or purse. Enthusiastic users of the soft-bag constructions point to their ability to often skip curbside or ticket-counter check-ins. They are specially joyful about speedy departures from the airport without the 5 to 15 minute wait at the carousel for luggage.

While lightweight luggage for this convenience-oriented market is available in a wide range of prices and sizes, manufacturers increasingly seek to offer new features such as pockets for wet towels or beachwear; corner pockets for shoes; special zipper access to soiled luggage; and fold-over designs that make it as easy to tote a garment bag as a pullman one.

One of the recent changes announced by Samsonite, Voyt, Tumi and some others eliminated the folding design all-metal hangers otherwise provided for flat storage of suits and dresses. A special construction feature first brought to the market by Wally-Bags makes it possible to pack the garment bag with clothing on home closet hangers. Both standard wire or wood hangers are securely locked into the garment bag. As with so many other convenience features, there is a price to pay. This use-your-hanger feature makes for a garment bag four-inches longer than earlier bags featuring folding-hook hangers. The combination of the larger garment bag plus the added weight of household wood hangers makes the pre-garment final weight and production cost higher than for most other garment bags. The lighter wire hangers of the dry-cleaning industry fail to support jacket shoulders so that garments crush during transit.

Using either the folding hook hanger provided with many garment bags, travelers have found that while jackets or dresses stay on the hangers, slacks, trousers or skirts will slip off the hanger to the foot of the garment bag. Crushed clothing is no way to start a vacation.

Seeking to solve that problem for their own garment bag buyers, designers at Ventura Travelware, Inc. developed an ingenious Flexible Double Bar Hanger. Slacks hanging under jackets are interleaved so they cannot slip free from the hanger. Clothing hangs flat during the trip. At the same time, provision was made to also accommodate ties secured with the same interleave procedure. These hangers may be used in hotel closets so unpacking and repacking are quick procedures.

The answer for travelers restricting themselves to carry-on luggage and seeking maximum of garment protection is much more than the Ventura flexible hanger with a double-bar.

Young gymnasts of Montvale Gymnastics compete

The following young gymnasts of Montvale Gymnastics, 459 Main St., Woburn, recently competed for top places at a United States Gymnastics Federation Boys Qualifying meet at Ellis Gymnastics in Braintree on Feb. 8:

Jason Epps of Woburn, Class IV (7-9 year-old). Jason scored 5th and 6th place in parallel bars, pommel horse, vault, rings and high bar. He is coached by Karl Dabritz and John Knowles.

John Trowbridge of Burlington, Class III c/o (10-12 year-old). John scored 5th in high bar, rings and pommel horse and 6th in parallel bars. His all around score was 24.9.

Brian McCoy of Woburn, Class III c/o (10-12 year-old). Brian placed all around 1st place in the meet scoring 1st in high bar, rings, 2nd in floor, vault and parallel bars and 3rd in pommel horse. He has qualified for the USGF Region 6 Boys State Championship Meet with a combined Compulsory/Optional score of 82.4.

This year's State meet will be held in May at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. The gymnasts must achieve a combined Compulsory/Optional score of 68 to qualify for the State meet.

Special programs for Girl Scouts

In honor of Girl Scout Week (March 9 through March 15) and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Jr.'s involvement in the Scout movement, Hammond Castle Museum will present special programs by advance reservations.

Special workshops in Medieval Brass Rubbing will be available for Scout groups after school during the week at $2.00 per person. On Saturday, March 14, a special program will be held on Medieval Society and the life in castles and towns during the Middle Ages at $1.00 per Scout and $3.00 per adult. The workshops and program will include a tour of the Castle and may be applied to a Brownie try-it badge or a Girl Scout's merit badge.

For more information or reservations, Scout leaders should call the Museum at 283-7673.
